'LET'S BE FRIENDS': M'DONALD

DIXIE HILL FOLK SEE LABOR BURY ITS MILL VICTIMS

4 Coffins End to End in Mass Funeral.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Marion, N. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Four who died at Marion mill gate were buried today. They were given a martyrs' funeral by 1,200 saddened yet militant fellow workers. The fifth striker who fell before the fusillade from a sheriff's posse will be buried tomorrow.

Marion's mass funeral was held on a grassy lawn facing the speaker's stand of the United Textile Workers union. Scrub oaks sheltered four gray coffins. A burning sun bore down on those outside the lawn. Across the red clay roadway the mill village straggled toward the mill a quarter of a mile away. In the distance were the Blue Ridge mountains. A stone's throw away armed soldiers stood guard, but never once intruded over the ridge that hid them.

It was a setting that Belasco would have liked—two modest white cottages separated from a Carolina cornfield by a ditch lined road. The spot chosen for the mass funeral was sacred to the textile union. It was here in the front yard of a strike sympathizer that the Marion mill union was born—here its leaders paid homage to their dead.

Coffins Linked by Ribbons.

Lined end to end and linked by a white ribbon bearing the lettered emblem of the union were the coffins of four of the men who died at the mill gate—George Jonas, Randolph Hall, Sam Vickers, and Luther Bryson. Seated uncomfortably in cane chairs tilted against the slope of the lawn were the women folks of the slain strikers. Behind them stood the men—fathers, brothers, and sons. They were dry-eyed, impassive, stoical. The women were unrestrained in their grief.

Further back, shoulder to shoulder, stood other kinfolks of the dead men. Children played about the cleared space on either side of the row of coffins. Mothers stood with babies in their arms.

Three Other Deputies Accused.

A mile away, in McDowell county courthouse, a stern faced judge continued his inquiry into the death of these four men and that of J. W. Roberts, the eighteen year old striker who died of bullet wounds early today. While the union was burying its dead Judge W. F. Harding was adding the names of three deputies to those of the fifteen already charged with the massacre of the strikers. Those held in $1,000 bail today were Deputies H. H. Owens, Robert Ward, and Tom Gowan.

Marion's first union mass funeral was a curious mixture of the primitive and the modern. Girls of the flapper type with short skirts, silk hose, high heeled shoes and painted cheeks stood beside wrinkled old ladies who dried their eyes on bandana handkerchiefs.

There were bearded men, clad in overalls and great floppy black hats with red mud on their brogans, testifying to long hikes down mountain trails and across soggy fields to arrive at the funeral.

No Evidence of Mob Spirit.

The crowd began to gather early. There was no evidence of mob spirit or veiled threats from the mourners. The hill men are tight lipped. The women frankly had come to mourn. Seven two motor hearses climbed over the hill. Two coffins were borne from each vehicle and placed on rude pine biers. The crowd followed into the yard. A man climbed on the speaker's stand. He was William Ross, local American Federation of Labor organizer.

"We are ready to start," he said. "Preacher Hicks, one of our own, will speak."

"Wait a minute, folks," said the young minister, "I want you to hear the finest preacher in these hills. He's Preacher Queen from over in the next county."

Preacher Queen stroked his long white beard. Then, pointing his right hand heavenward, he spoke.

"The Devil's Work."

"This is the saddest time this old man has ever seen," he said in a roaring pulpit voice. "The devil has got into the world and O, what a pity! What will become of the world if we don't get the devil out of it? This is the devil's work. The poor class of the world has been persecuted since the beginning. This old man knows he are not so high in society, but God loves us. If He were here today He would weep over this scene. The old

ORDERS INQUIRY INTO COLORADO PRISON MUTINY

Canon City, Colo., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—An inquiry into the causes of the fatal mutiny in the state penitentiary here will be instituted at once by Warden F. H. Crawford. There were twelve deaths, including the slaying of seven guards. The governor of the state, W. H. Adams, arrived late today and indorsed the judgment of the warden in refusing the demands of the convicts' ringleaders. While this refusal resulted in the death of four of the guards, the governor holds that to have yielded would have meant in the end a far greater death list.

Too Harsh? Too Lenient?

Some of the problems to be tackled in the inquiry will be: Was the prison policy too kindly? Was it too harsh? Was the lack of employment—such as road building, recently abandoned—involved as a cause of the outbreak?

The methods of the Colorado prison have been indorsed recently by prison experts. The intent expressed is to make the inquiry into this almost unexampled outbreak a thorough one.

ENDS IN SUICIDE; SURRENDER

Canon City, Colo., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Suicide and surrender here today followed murder and destruction to end one of the bloodiest prison riots in modern penal history.

Seven guards and four convicts had been killed when the death of the desperate leader, Danny Daniels, by his own hand, and the surrender of the 150 convicts he held under his rule in the embattled cellhouse No. 3, ended the mutiny. A dozen others were wounded.

All the leaders of the rebellion—and prison officials believe most of the fighting was done by these five leaders—died either by suicide or at the hands of Daniels before the riot ended in surrender at dawn today.

Prison a Blackened Ruin.

Tonight the smoke blackened walls of the penitentiary buildings, where corridors are flecked with blood, were quiet. It seemed hard for the guards on duty to realize that just 24 hours ago the prison was wracked by mutiny in which machine gun fire, the crack of rifles and later the detonations of dynamite charges told a story of violent death and destruction.

Officials of the penitentiary estimated the property damage at about $300,000 and turned their efforts to investigation and reconstruction.

Warden F. E. Crawford, himself wounded, announced that convicts at the penitentiary will be set to work immediately rebuilding cell houses Nos. 1 and 2, which were destroyed by flames during the riot, as well as the main dining hall and the chapel, which were likewise burned.

This afternoon National Guard tents were pitched in the prison yard. These will house a majority of the convicts until the cell houses can be rebuilt.

One Guard Driven Mad.

The riot, which snuffed itself out early this morning with the death of the five ringleaders, was the worst in the history of the Colorado penitentiary, and one of the bloodiest in the history of the nation.

One of the guards, Marvin Duncan, was under close guard in a hospital. He is believed to have lost his mind as the result of a night of terror spent in cell house No. 3 in company with the mutinous convicts.

He saw two other unarmed guards shot to death and their bodies tossed out a window. He saw two others, bound hand and foot, shot to death against a wall and permitted to lie where they fell. And he heard Danny Daniels, official executioner for the revolting convicts, send a message to the warden that "Duncan will be the next to die."

The guards were killed in an effort by the convicts to compel prison authorities to comply with their demand for three automobiles and unmolested freedom.

Half Dozen Led Revolt.

Following a preliminary investigation, Warden Crawford announced he is convinced only half a dozen desperate criminals actually participated in the riot. The remainer, he said, were compelled to accompany these men

THE OLD MAN OF THE SEA

FORCE STOCKS TO NEW LEVELS ON SECOND DAY OF BIG SELLING WAVE

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Prices cracked again today on the New York stock exchange as a second wave of selling orders swamped the traders on the floor of the exchange and millions of dollars in paper profits vanished.

Speculators were scared into throwing their stocks on the market by bearish rumors, the principal one being that British investors were liquidating billions of dollars worth of American securities.

The chief sufferers on the list were:

	Closing Price.	Net Loss.
Allied Chemical	295	7
American Tobacco B	160	5½
Auburn Auto	385	12
J. I. Case	350	25
Brooklyn Union Gas	210	27½
Cocoa Cola	142⅝	5¼
Columbia Carbon	275	13
Commercial Solvents	550	10
Continental Can	78⅛	5
Delaware & Hudson	185	9
Motor Products	80	18¾
National Lead	172	13¾
Newton Steel	85	9
Norfolk & Western	253½	6
Otis Elevator	40	3

Real Silk Hosiery	64	7
Union Carbon	90¾	7⅛
U. S. Steel	210	3
Westinghouse Electric	208	7
Wright Aero	90	30

The "little fellows" were the big losers. It was the 50 and 100 and 200 share lots that provided the selling power that drove even the best stocks down.

WESLEY M. DIXON BABY CHOKES TO DEATH IN HOME

Margaret, the nine months daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley M. Dixon, was accidentally strangled to death yesterday afternoon in the Dixon home, 2360 Lincoln Park West. A nurse found the infant dead in her perambulator, her arm and neck entangled in a strap used to bind in the coverlets.

Mrs. Dixon, a daughter of Silas H. Strawn, summoned her aunt, Dr. Julia C. Strawn, 38 East Schiller street. Dr. Strawn called in an inhalator squad, but the baby was beyond resuscitation. The coroner's office decided an inquest would be unnecessary, and private funeral services will be held today.

The Dixons, whose marriage was one of the social events of 1927, have another child, 2 year old Wesley. Mr. Dixon is president of the Sefton Manufacturing company, 59 East Madison street, and a brother of George W. Dixon, head of the Arthur Dixon Transfer company.

Bandits Trail Family; Seize $23,000 Gems

Five young men with revolvers early this morning robbed James G. Hodgkinson, his wife, Marie, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. C. A. Roberts, of $90 in cash and $23,000 worth of jewelry after following their automobile from a loop theater to Mr. Hodgkinson's residence at 4926 Kimbark avenue.

Mr. Hodgkinson is president of Hodgkinson & Durfee, insurance brokers at 175 West Jackson boulevard. Mrs. Roberts was the first wife of Col. John Roberts, millionaire packer. She divorced him several years ago. She lives in the Flamingo hotel, 5520 South Shore drive.

Trailed from Loop Theater.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodgkinson, with their two daughters, Carolyn, 13 years old, and Laura, 14 years old, and Mrs. Roberts had attended the theater. They got into Mrs. Roberts' car, driven by her chauffeur, Andrew Nickleson, about 11:30 p. m. The broker and chauffeur said later they thought they saw the robbers' car cut in behind them as they drove along the outer drive at 22d street.

As the Roberts car stopped in front of Mr. Hodgkinson's home the robbers' car pulled up sharply behind them.

Two of the young men ran up as Mr. Hodgkinson and Nickelson stepped from the car.

"Throw up your hands!" one of the men commanded. While one of the bandits engaged the chauffeur in conversation another robbed Mr. Hodgkinson and two others got into the car with the women and girls.

Ordered to Keep Quiet.

"Please don't drive us away from here," Mrs. Hodgkinson pleaded. "These are my little daughters. I hope you won't harm us."

"No, we won't harm you," one of the men replied. "All you've got to do, lady, is to keep quiet and no one will be harmed.

In the meantime one of the bandits took a large emerald ring, valued at $9,000; a solitaire diamond ring, valued at $6,000, a lavalier watch and a diamond necklace, each worth $3,000 from Mrs. Hodgkinson. They overlooked a $5,000 diamond ring she had managed to turn around under her glove.

The robber outside, menacing the broker with a revolver he kept in his side coat pocket, had taken $90 in money and a $2,000 diamond ring from Mr. Hodgkinson.

The robbers then made the women and girls get out of the car, lined the whole party, including Nickleson, the chauffeur, with their face along the hedge, and drove away in both cars.

"The whole thing took less than five minutes," Mr. Hodgkinson told the Hyde Park police. "I'm sure they followed our car from the loop. All constantly kept handkerchiefs pressed to their faces so we could not get a good look at them."

SCORE SLAIN AS PHILIPPINE POLICE BATTLE NATIVES

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 5.—[Saturday]—[U. P.]—The Philippines Herald here received dispatches today from Iba, capital of Zambales province on Luzon island, declaring the entire population of a Negrito village, except a four year old child, had been wiped out by furious fighting between inhabitants and constabulary. Although the messages failed to give the number of residents in the village, they indicated more than a score had been killed.

The battle started, it was said, when the constabulary officers sought to capture ten escaped Negrito prisoners who had sought refuge in the village. The little community was situated in a rugged mountain region.

Soldiers opened fire on the village, but the inhabitants, instead of consenting to surrender the fugitives, shot poisoned arrows at the law enforcers, and a pitched battle followed.

East Chicago Mayor, Police Chief Named

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Seven months of federal investigation into charges that the prohibition law has corrupted most of northern Indiana was climaxed here today when a special grand jury returned indictment naming 299 men and women as having violated the liquor, white slave, narcotic, and auto theft laws. The defendants are from East Chicago, Gary, South Bend, and Fort Wayne.

Of the list 213 alone are from Gary and East Chicago, which have been regarded as the wettest spots in the northern federal district. United States Attorney Oliver Loomis has presented evidence of hundreds of liquor law violations in both cities during the five weeks that the jury has met.

Will Arrest 80 Monday.

The names of eighty of the defendants were not made known and cannot be learned until they are arrested on Monday. It is no secret, however, that they name largely persons from Gary in two large liquor conspiracy cases, some hint of which has leaked out in the course of the inquiry.

The more important defendants named publicly today are from East Chicago and were arrested Aug. 16 in a raid which brought first open knowledge that the government had designs on law breakers in Lake county.

Mayor Hale Heads List.

The following head the list:

East Chicago, Mayor Raleigh P. Hale, Chief of Police James W. Regan, Chief of Detectives Martin Zarkovich, Attorney Lester Ottenheimer, Nick Sudovich, bootleg lord; Grice Chandler, vice lord; George R. Oswego, one time fight promoter; Tony Zaleski, reputed partner of Sudovich.

The more important Gary defendants named are:

Charge Many Violations.

Mayor Hale and Chief Regan are regarded as the principal East Chicago defendants. They were arrested last August in a raid and later released in $20,000 bonds charged with conspiracy to violate the dry law. Pending the arrest of other defendants, who are charged with conspiracy with them, Mr. Loomis would only say that the two stand charged with almost every crime in the prohibition calendar. According to the true bill they manufactured, bought, sold, transported and imported intoxicating liquor. The importation count claims that they engineered certain shipments of liquor from Canada.

Attorney Ottenheimer is charged with obstructing justice by interfering with a government agent. He also was arrested the night of the raid and held in $20,000 bonds. Zarkovich is named in an importation conspiracy and is at liberty in $5,000 bonds.

Indicted for Murder.

Sudovich also is under indictment in Lake county for the murder of Urosh Marovich, who was slain in a beer war on Easter morning, 1928. With Zaleski, Sudovich is alleged to have controlled most of the booze sold. Zaleski is reported to be the owner of about ten saloons in the joint towns of East Chicago and Indiana Harbor. Both conspired together, according to the indictment.

Chandler, a Negro, has been called the overlord of prostitution in the district for years. Several of the houses he is alleged to own were raided in August. He is also charged with a rum conspiracy.

In Gary Necco and Sante are re-

CAPITAL GREETS PREMIER ON HIS PEACE MISSION

Hoover and Briton Shun Treaty.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—After a twenty minute private conversation with President Hoover tonight, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald made a statement intended to put an end to rumors that he is seeking an Anglo-American alliance.

Upon receiving the newspaper correspondents at the British embassy after his return from the White House, Mr. MacDonald said he wished it understood that he has come to Washington to discuss with Mr. Hoover the broad aspects of the preservation of world peace and to promote cordial relations between the United States and Great Britain, but with no thought of proposing an alliance.

Policy Already Known.

It already was known before the arrival of Mr. MacDonald that the President would refuse to be drawn into any discussion of an Anglo-American alliance or entente or of any questions of American policy save those pertaining to a navy reduction agreement based on parity between the American and British navies.

In the conversations between the heads of the two English speaking nations that will begin tomorrow at the White House, Mr. Hoover will renew his pledge that the United States will reduce its navy to as low a point as the British will agree to, provided substantial equality be established.

Like Mr. MacDonald, the President looks upon the mission of the British prime minister as one of good will animated by a sincere desire to promote friendly relations between the two countries. Mr. Hoover reciprocates the spirit in which Mr. MacDonald comes to our shores as the first British prime minister—the first chief of state of any power—to visit us officially. He is ready to sit down with the prime minister and review in its widest aspects the problem of the maintenance of peace and good will.

Methods to Be Discussed.

Inasmuch as the social and economic progress of the United States and Great Britain is dependent upon the preservation of peace, the President and prime minister are to discuss what efforts should be made to insure this result and what methods should be pursued to promote domestic progress.

It is known that this is the understanding of both Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald as to the scope of their conferences. This scope would admit of discussion of a five power pact to preserve the peace of the Atlantic region similar to the four power pact for the Pacific to which the United States is a party.

Definitely excluded from the scope of the conversations, however, in addition to an alliance, are such questions as the entrance of the United States into the league of nations and the world court, reopening of the war debt settlements, American tariff revision, and prohibition with respect to British complaints of the depredations of American coast guardsmen in such cases as the sinking of the Canadian schooner "I'm Alone."

Broader Aspects Considered.

The navy reduction problem will be considered in its broader aspects. Technical details of limitation and of the establishment of parity are to be avoided. This means that no attempt will be made by Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald to bridge the chasm separating London from Washington on the allotment of cruisers and tonnage that would produce parity. The two countries are still at odds on the number of big cruisers and the total tonnage to be allowed the United States. This difference is to be dealt with in subsequent diplomatic negotiations.

The utmost significance attaches to the studied disavowal by Mr. MacDonald, with the concurrence of Mr. Hoover, of any project looking toward an Anglo-American alliance or entente. It is not doubted that this step was taken for the express purpose of allaying alarm in France on this score. That Great Britain and France are not on the best of terms at present is common gossip. For several weeks there has been speculation abroad on the possibility of a disruption of the entente cordiale between the two countries.

French Apprehensive.

As the visit of Mr. MacDonald to Washington approached the French press has teemed with suggestions that Britain intends to divorce France and propose marriage to America.

These French suspicions were boding no good for the success of the five power navy reduction conference which is to meet in London in January.

Mr. MacDonald stated that the formal invitations to the London conference will be issued at an early date.

The prime minister received more than 100 members of the press in the drawing room of the British embassy and was introduced by Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador.

The impression that Mr. MacDonald makes upon one at first meeting is one of earnestness and sincerity. You note at once his dark, pellucid eyes—the eyes of a poet—and the mouth, a bit drawn down at the corners—the mouth of a man who has known sorrow. A sad face until of a sudden his smile creeping from beneath his gray mustache lights up his seamed features. His manner is quiet, undemonstrative, unassuming; his voice resonant and musical.

Moved by Warm Welcome.

"There is one thing uppermost in my mind that I would like to express through the press," said the prime minister as he stood in the embassy drawing room with the correspondents grouped around him. "That is to convey how deeply I have been moved by the magnificent reception that the people of this country have given me since I landed today. It has been very touching, almost impossible for me to put into words how grateful I am for the warm and friendly reception all along the route. I am sure my daughter Ishbel will say the same thing when she sees the representatives of the press tomorrow.

"This is not my first visit to the United States. Therefore I have always known that the American people are warm hearted but the proof they have given me today is very touching indeed. I am sure the people of Great Britain will appreciate the greeting the American people have given them through me."

Represents Whole Nation.

Mr. MacDonald said that he would like to assure the press that he is not here as party leader, but as a representative of the whole body of public opinion in Great Britain. They have a friendship for the American people, he said, which is very great, very profound. The British people are praying that a way will be found to bring them in heart and in spirit closer and closer to the American people. But let there be no mistake about that, he warned. He said that there is no idea of an alliance between the two countries.

America, he said, is blessed beyond words in being removed so far from Europe that it does not require anything in the nature of an alliance. The alliance belongs to the order of diplomacy. What the British people want and what Mr. MacDonald believes that the American people have shown a desire for, is a just understanding.

Refers to Press Power.

He told the newspaper men that they had a tremendous power in their hands to remove any misunderstanding. He said the trouble in the world today is that of misunderstanding and the main purpose of his visit is to try to make it impossible in any disagreements between the two countries to mix understandings with those disagreements.

The United States, he said, has done a great thing for the whole world in negotiating the Kellogg pact for the renunciation of war, signed in Paris only a few months ago. This pact, he said, is one of the most substantial advances toward peace that has ever been made and for that Europe has to thank America.

Mr. MacDonald wanted it understood that there is no reason for other nations assuming that the United States and Great Britain are doing anything hostile in any shape or form to them. Nothing is further from the thoughts of the two countries, he said. Any successful solution of the problems between the United States and Great Britain is not meant and must not be taken to mean that they are leaving other nations out in the cold, he said. Nothing would please the United States and Great Britain more than the successful removal of misunderstanding not only between the two nations but between other countries.

Escorted to White House.

Mr. MacDonald was escorted to the White House at 6 o'clock by Ambassador Howard and Capt. Buchanan, naval aid to President Hoover. Miss Ishbel MacDonald and Lady Isabella Howard followed in another car with Maj. McQuillan, another White House aid.

The callers quickly alighted and walked briskly to the door. To the shouts of "Just a minute!" Premier MacDonald and Sir Esme Howard halted a moment at the portal and faced the battery of cameras. They awaited the arrival of the ladies and then entered the White House.

Callers Enter Green Room.

Following the custom of such functions the callers entered the green room. A few minutes later President Hoover walked into the blue room which adjoins the formal reception room.

Sir Esme Howard was escorted to the President and asked permission to present the English statesman. Then the formal presentation was made. Premier MacDonald then presented his daughter to the President and the party went into the red room where Mrs. Hoover was awaiting them. They were then presented to Mrs. Hoover. Secretary of State Stimson also joined the party in the red room.

While the ladies and Sir Esme Howard were assembled in a group in the red room, the President and Premier MacDonald stood apart and had their chat. It is reported that they were in earnest conversation and presumably the discussion dealt with some of the questions that will be discussed later.

Camp Invitation Accepted.

President Hoover formally invited Mr. MacDonald and his daughter to be guests at the White House tomorrow and accompany him and Mrs. Hoover to the President's camp on the Rapidan river. The invitation was accepted and the premier said that he was hopeful that the weather would permit of the trip to the camp.

Honors reserved for the President of this country or visiting rulers of other countries were paid to Premier MacDonald when he and his party, accompanied by Secretary of State Stimson and Ambassador Howard, arrived in the capital.

Greeted by Officials.

As the premier stepped from the train, followed by Secretary Stimson and Sir Esme, he was greeted by Under Secretary of State Joseph P. Cotton and a group which included George Akerson and Walter H. Newton, secretaries to President Hoover, the President's military and naval aides, Assistant Secretaries of State Wilber J. Carr, Francis White, Nelson T. Johnson and other state department officials as well as Roland Ian Campbell, counselor of the British embassy, and the entire embassy staff.

A moment or two later, Miss MacDonald, the premier's daughter; Lady Howard, and Mrs. Stimson joined the group about the premier, and after greetings had been exchanged, the party, led by Mr. MacDonald and Secretary Stimson, moved toward the station concourse where marines in full dress uniform had formed an aisle through the crowds to the presidential waiting room.

As a fleet of White House automobiles were marshaled into position, the battalion of field artillery, which acted as a guard of honor for the premier, moved off the plaza and two troops of cavalry from Fort Meyer, Va., swung into place to act as the premier's escort up Pennsylvania avenue to the British embassy.

Thousands, respectful rather than demonstrative, lined the avenue to catch a glimpse of MacDonald and doff their hats or wave handkerchiefs as he passed. Perhaps the most enthusiastic greeting of all was that given by the hundreds massed in Connecticut avenue, near the British embassy, where a company of marines and a company of blue jackets had been stationed.

New Yorkers Greet Premier in Typical Fanfare Fashion

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—It was a typical New York welcome that J. Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain and ex-officio good will envoy extraordinary received upon his arrival at the nation's gateway en route to Washington today.

There was the usual formal how-do-you-do by Grover Whalen, official glad hander of the city government, and his own hand picked committee of local notables, down the bay; there were the usual cheers and ticker tape on the usual noisy parade up Broadway to city hall; the usual ceremonious reception with Mayor "Jimmie" Walker telling the visitor how glad everybody was to see him and all, here in this greatest of all cities; the usual curious noisy sidewalk throngs, band play and bunting—Father Knickerbocker in top hat and spats with a flag on his shoulder and a cowbell in his hand, doing the elegant.

Steward Gets Officious.

And there were the usual blunders, too—an officious smoking room steward on the Berengaria taking charge of the party even before it got under way and making the Whalen greeting a "strictly private" affair by barring the door on every representative of the press regardless, and everybody else who might let the news get out; Hector Fuller, master of ceremonies at city hall decorously proclaiming the arrival of "Commissioner Grover Whalen and J. Ramsay MacDonald" to the crowd in the aldermanic chamber of city hall where the reception was held, and a few minutes later sonorously greeting the visitor as the "prime minister of the United States;" a near mishap, when the city tug Macom on which the premier was taken off the Berengaria at Quarantine suddenly swerved and all but jerked the gangplank from under the diplomat as he set foot on it.

Not enough to spoil the show, 'tis true, but each and all undoubtedly contributing to the interest—even the amusement—if not the peace of mind of the British chief of state.

Sketches Vision of Future.

There were some two hours of it—the greeting, the reception and all—during which Mr. MacDonald found occasion in the course of an interview [typically New York with no quarter shown and none asked], a speech and a series of voluntary asides to introduce his mission with a bid for popular support, express his hope and confidence of official coöperation and briefly sketch his vision of a future wherein the world shall be warless or nearly so and all men brethren with the flags of earth's two greatest nations, Great Britain and the United States flying side by side at the head of the procession as civilization marches onward and upward through the years. Or something to that general effect.

After which the premier and his pink cheeked daughter, Ishbel and the rest of the party took train and set out for Washington where the premier will seek to get down to cases with President Hoover on the question of naval disarmament and maybe debts and other things.

King Radios Best Wishes.

It was evidently the prime minister's intention to limit his public utterances upon his arrival here today to his formal response to the mayor's greeting and the commonplace of other events of the reception program. He had prepared a statement over night—announcing that his king had radioed wishes of success for his mission—which was distributed to the press while the Whalen "secret meeting" was under way in the locked smoking room on the Berengaria.

But the press' failure to get in on the greeting, or the importunities of some 75 or more newsgatherers who went down the bay on the Macom or something caused him to change his mind. Hardly had the Macom got under way on its return trip to the Battery than the premier from his seat in the boat's smoking room began to say things for publication.

Interested in Relations.

"I'm prepared to find a great measure of good will and a desire for cooperation," he told the news gatherers, referring to his visit to Washington. But he wanted it understood that he was not immediately concerned with the subject of world peace at large. Rather he is concentrating, he said, only on the relations between ourselves—"England and America." "And," he added, "no subject is arousing more interest on the continent just now than those relations."

Somebody wanted to know if Europe is not becoming "afraid" of the trend events are taking.

On the way up the bay the visitor was honored with an official salute of nineteen guns fired from Fort Castle Williams on Governor's island.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson represented the national government in the reception, but took no active part in the ceremonies. The secretary came here last night to accompany the premier and his party back to Washington.

President and MacDonald to Discuss Next Naval Step

BY JOHN STEELE.

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—When Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the British Labor party and first British prime minister ever to visit the United States, confers with President Hoover tomorrow the two men will find little to talk about in completing details of the naval agreement between Britain and America. That has all been done before the prime minister sailed in the interchanges in London and Washington between Ambassador Dawes and MacDonald on the one hand and between Mr. Hoover and the British representatives on the other. The few outstanding technical details are too trivial to occupy the attention of the President and prime minister, but can safely be left to the experts to be ironed out.

What will have to be the subject of the most serious discussion, however, will be what is to happen next. The five power conference is to be held in January and on it depends not whether naval rivalry between America and Britain shall cease—that is already assured—but whether it will be possible for Britain and America so to reduce their naval armaments in concert with one another as to lift the burden of taxation which is crushing Britain and doing no good to the United States.

It is just as well squarely to face the fact that all depends on the attitude of France and Italy.

Japan Ready to Coöperate.

Japan already has given assurance that she is willing to play along with the two leading naval powers. If this proves to be so, as there seems to be little reason to doubt, America's Pacific problem is out of the way, but Britain's Atlantic problem, her problem of the Mediterranean and of the narrow seas around her coasts, all remain, and it is a perfectly definite fact that Britain cannot afford to and will not so reduce her naval strength as to leave herself open to successful attack in these waters.

The situation, therefore, is that if France and Italy will accept the Anglo-American thesis that navies are purely defensive and partake rather of the nature of police than soldiers, it may be possible to reduce armaments and save money. If, however, what at the moment seems most likely, they insist on maintaining large destroyer and submarine forces, Britain will be compelled to provide counter-armament and will do so with the full consent and good will of the United States, which under the agreement now being ratified by the two statesmen will have the right to build along with Britain, maintaining the parity which has been established in the tentative figures announced a few weeks ago.

Actual Figures Decried.

One of the highest authorities told THE TRIBUNE a few days ago that he regarded it as unfortunate that actual figures had been published, as the tendency would be for the public to accept them as final and not merely as tentative.

The one thing that the British want to avoid is any appearance of an Anglo-American alliance or entente directed against the rest of the world. The French and Italians are already suspicious of this and any confirmation of this suspicion would mean the sure failure of the five power conference.

BRITAIN REVEALS TERMS OF PEACE PACT WITH RUSSIA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The official secrecy concerning the details of the Anglo-Soviet agreement was ended tonight when the foreign office issued the text of the protocol relative to the procedure to be followed for settlement of the outstanding questions between Great Britain and Russia. Five questions to be settled by negotiations are:

1. The attitude of the two governments towards the treaties of 1924; 2. Commercial and allied questions; 3. Debt claims and counter claims, both of a private and intergovernmental nature; 4. Fisheries; 5. Application of previous treaties and conventions.

Russia Sees It as Victory.

[Copyright: 1929: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Oct. 4.—The soviet press hails the signature of the Anglo-Russian protocol as a diplomatic success and indicates that the British Labor party conference at Brighton and pressure by the rank and file of the working electorate led Foreign Minister Henderson to modify his original standpoint, which made an agreement possible.

ASK GIRL WHERE TO DROWN BABY; GIVE IT TO HER

New Orleans, La., Oct. 4.—[U.P.]—A well dressed elderly man and two women drove up to Miss Ida Waller's dooryard today and asked the way to the nearest canal.

"It's two blocks east," the girl told them. "Why do you want to know?"

"We want to drown this baby," the man replied.

Miss Waller remonstrated, pleading that the child be saved.

"All right, you take it, then," the woman holding the baby said, and the child was thrust into Miss Waller's arms.

SENATOR DILL PAYS TRIBUTE TO PREMIER AND HIS MISSION

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.] — Approval of the attempt of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in coming to the United States was expressed today by Senator C. C. Dill [Dem., Wash.] in the senate.

"Never before in the history of the world, at least of the modern world, did the premier of the British empire go to meet the chief magistrate of some other land, especially America, in regard of all diplomatic rules and diplomatic precedents," said Senator Dill. "It took a man from the ranks of labor who would have the courage to take such a step.

"I wish to voice my opinion that the premier of the British empire and the President of the United States cannot go too far in their efforts for the limitation of armaments to meet the hopes of the masses of the people of this country and those of the British empire."

ISASTER LURKS IN NEW LEAGUES, CHURCHILL SAYS

alls U. S.-Anglo Amity Preventive of War.

Anglo-American friendship was de-ared last night by Winston Church-, former British chancellor of the exchequer, as the surest guarantee gainst troubles that may arise through the grouping of the world's nations into vaster units conscious of their own interests on a continen-tal scale.

His remarks were made in a speech delivered to the Commercial club of Chicago at a dinner in the Black-stone hotel.

"You have heard this talk about a United States of Europe," Mr. Church-ill said. "So far as this means a reduction of tariff barriers, a consoli-dation of credits, a diminution of arm-ies and a reunion of the European family, it can only be a great bless-ing. But if this system led to an aggressive form of continental self-centeredness in Europe, Asia or America which created rivalries more formidable than those which have hitherto existed between countries, then we shall not have freed the world from the danger of great wars.

Service Britain Can Render.

"Now here is where the British people has a new service to render to them and to every one else. We do not belong to any continent. We belong to all; to Europe, to America, to Asia, to Africa, and to Australasia. We stretch a broad lateral band or girdle across the ocean and around the world.

"Beyond the gleaming waters of Lake Michigan rise the friendly shores of Canada, unguarded in a noble con-tinuance along the frontiers of three thousand miles. The ties of sentiment and tradition that unite Canada and the British empire tend to grow stronger as time passes, and with them, simultaneously, also grow the ties of interest, of good will, of neigh-borliness, and of intimacy between Canada and the United States.

"Here we have a vast, unifying process, which is proceeding between the English speaking peoples, linking them together in a thousand natural ways. That double and simultaneous process is a sure guarantee against the cleavages arising between conti-nents and hemispheres in the place of actual antagonisms that have al-ready wrought such grievous harm."

Premier Brings British Hopes.

Mr. Churchill touched cautiously on the naval negotiations between the United States and Great Britain. After describing himself as an opponent of Premier MacDonald and adding that he was glad to see his country repre-sented by so experienced a statesman and so distinguished a man, he said there was a widespread desire in the British empire for an agreement that would put the whole question of naval armaments in the background for gen-erations.

But, he added, the settlement made now would have to pass the test of reality and put a permanent end to the "ridiculous and unnatural" weigh-ing of warships and measuring of can-non that has gone on for ten years. A narrowly interpreted covenant, with navies built as replicas and com-pared day by day by naval experts and newspapers to make sure that either side had an advantage, would involve continuous interference in each other's concerns; under the guise of parity it might produce a neck and neck rivalry, he said.

Feels No Danger from U. S.

"Rather than that, it would be bet-ter that both our countries should go our ways in perfect freedom and that each should maintain whatever navy it thinks necessary for its safety or its influence," the British statesman con-tinued. "We in Britain, whose life and daily bread have always depended on the sea, are bound to be very cautious in binding ourselves by treaty to rigid limits of naval strength. On the other hand, we cannot bring our-selves to feel that the growth of the splendid American navy bodes us any ill.

"On the contrary, we think it is more likely that our fleets, if ever used at all, which I greatly doubt, will be used together for some high pur-pose in the preservation of world peace."

More than 300 members of the club and guests heard the address. Mr. Churchill was introduced by Charles Fox, president of the organization.

Doesn't Smoke, Drink, or Paint

Ishbel MacDonald, daughter of British premier, who arrived in New York with her father yesterday and talked freely to interviewers, as she appeared while playing deck tennis on the Berengaria on her way across the Atlantic.

No, She Doesn't Ever Smoke, Drink or Paint, Ishbel Says

The 23 year old "mistress of Down-ing street" was matching wits with the lady members of the press, parry-ing some of their questions, answering others, laughing others away—all graciously and in good humor.

No, she doesn't smoke, she told them; nor drink, nor paint her face. And she isn't at all concerned whether she is to be seated next to Lady How-ard, the British ambassador's wife, at the big Washington dinner, or whether she ranks next to Mrs. Edward Gann, the Vice President's sister and official hostess, or who.

Likes Agreeable Neighbors.

"All that interests me at such af-fairs is that I have an agreeable neighbor," she said, laughingly.

Asked to talk on her "career," Miss MacDonald declared firmly, "I have no career."

Asked if she preferred the "modern girl" and her manners to the "Vic-torian girl" and hers, she smiled—with the suggestion of a twinkle in her eye:

"I never met a Victorian girl."

Would she go shopping while in New York next week? No, she thought she had "all the clothes I need."

Like her famous father, Miss Mac-Donald is interested above all else just now, she told her interviewers, in the subject of world peace. And she added that in her country it is the women more than the men who are backing the peace movement.

walked along the station platform with an athletic stride to meet Mrs. Stim-son and Lady Isabella Howard, the British ambassador's wife.

With a dash of vivid color at her throat—from a yellow and black fu-turistically figured bandana scarf—Miss MacDonald's attire was similar to models displayed for smart young Americans at college or for shopping. The almost invisible dots on her drill suit were matched by her gauntlets, and she carried a trim black leather purse.

Miss MacDonald went to the White House to be received by Mrs. Hoover still enthusiastic, although the strain of the journey was beginning to show in her face. She was still wearing her chic black ensemble.

On the way back to the embassy the car carrying Miss MacDonald and Lady Isabella narrowly escaped sev-eral collisions after being separated from the prime minister's automobile.

WINS CAPITAL HEARTS

Washington, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Modestly dressed in black and smiling so her rosy cheeks and bright eyes glowed, Ishbel MacDonald returned the first welcome of the nation's capital today in a manner that won affectionate re-gard.

From the moment Secretary Stim-son helped her from the train until she graciously bowed adieu to Mrs. Stimson under the British embassy portico, the British prime minister's daughter emanated friendliness. She manifestly enjoyed the cheering of government workers, the clattering caissons, the uniformed soldiery, and white-spatted diplomats out in honor of her and her father.

Preceding the prime minister, she

GIRL IN CELL AS BANDIT BAFFLES POLICE QUIZZERS

Calm in Telling About Spotted Career.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

She's the coolest redhead the Hyde Park police ever clapped into a cell. Hardly a hundred pounds of her, but she has the entire district stumped.

By all the rules of criminology, Jo-sephine Rust is the type of girl who simply doesn't "get into a jam." Yet there she is, wedged tightly between a charge of burglary and assault and a probable penitentiary sentence. Half the Hyde Park police say she is "tak-ing the rap" for a man. The other half says there isn't any man.

She tried to stage a daring daylight robbery. With a chloroform saturated handkerchief and a cigaret case shaped like a pistol she invaded the room of Mrs. Rebecca Bobbe at the Chicago Beach hotel Thursday at noontime to secure $4,000 in gems. She failed.

Mrs. Bobbe grappled with the girl, who fought like a young tigress to get away—fought till her hands were torn and bleeding, and her face marked with two gouges beneath one eye. But with the help of other guests she was finally subdued.

"Desperate for money, of course, or I'd never have tried it," she informed Sergt. John Egan, who questioned her. "It was my first attempt—he said it would be easy."

Husband Figures in Case.

"He" was her husband, Thomas Rust, she said, in her faultless, easy English. Garage mechanic by trade, bootlegger when business was slow. Tall, blonde, blue eyed, two years at Alabama university. Married nine years. Sometimes they had money and lived well. Sometimes they had none—and didn't. Wednesday night she slept in somebody's private garage. She didn't know where her husband had been.

Soft voiced, tastefully garbed, un-deniably intelligent and unusually well educated, she is a totally new kind of customer to the police. Not a Catholic, she says of herself, but convent bred, her manner is as gentle as that of the veriest nun she claims as teacher. She is the direct antithesis of the hardboiled gun girl in whose shoes she has been stepping.

Was Raised in South.

"I'm twenty-four," she replied to questions, not glibly, but without re-luctance. "I was raised in the south—Birmingham. Was a day pupil at a convent there. My husband is thirty-six. We've been on the move almost constantly, in practically every large city. No, I don't know where to find him. I only know he won't be back after me. It's my guess he's out of the state by this time."

Only once or twice, however, was there anything resembling a southern accent in her voice, as when she re-marked of her court ordeal:

"Hope it won't be too ho'hid. They say I can get life for it—but there's nothing to do but take the medicine. At least I'll know what the next day's going to be."

Sergt. Egan holds that here is a sweet girl graduate of "the rackets." She purchased chloroform, she looked over the hotel the previous day, he says. She probably hasn't any hus-band. And he admits:

Realty Dealer and Daughter Robbed of $510 in Office

John E. Nelson, his 22 year old daughter, Violet, and Fred Whitcomb, a clerk, were held up by three men last evening in Nelson's real estate office at 2830 East 79th street. They took $510.43 from a safe and escaped in an automobile.

On to Washington

MRS. DOLLY CURTIS GANN.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann of Wash-ington and Topeka went through Chi-cago yesterday without any one being the wiser. Which doesn't mean that no one saw or talked with the new second lady of the land—just officially so dubbed by President Hoover him-self. It merely means that though she smiled, and talked, and posed, she tabooed the one topic on which a per-sistent press was most anxious to have her comment.

It was interesting but not exciting to know that she was pleasantly an-ticipatory about the visit to Wash-ington of Premier Ramsay MacDon-ald and his daughter, Ishbel. It was a matter of public knowledge that she herself was returning to the capital to assist in the functions to be given for them. It was amusing to hear her extolling "Brother Charlie" as "about the sweetest chap on earth." But it was disappointing to find out that she still is resolutely silent on her new status at the diplomatic din-ner tables.

"I never, never discuss that," she retorted when questioned, rearrang-ing her soft silver fox fur. "Mrs. Longworth? She and I are the best of friends. There's never been any trouble—just you reporters."

RANIERI RECEIVES NEW THREAT; HIS HOME IS GUARDED

Friends Fear Release of Kidnaper Petitti.

The home of A. Frank Ranieri at 4901 Altgeld street was under guard by a police detail last night after he had received another threatening letter in connection with the sensational kidnaping and recovery of his 10 year old son, Billy, a year ago. The letter was believed to have been sent through the mails by extortionist friends of Angelo Petitti and Andrew Cappal-lano, who were convicted of kidnaping the boy and each sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Inspiration for the letter was be-lieved to have come from Petitti's re-cent move to obtain his release through the Illinois Supreme court on a super-sedeas bond, pending action by the court on his appeal. The police and the state's attorney's office believed friends of Petitti might be under the impression that Ranieri somehow had something to do with the court's re-fusal to give Petitti his liberty on bonds.

Threat Comes in Letter.

The threat letter read: "Mr. Ranieri—We let you go and you no take care you business, now we take care for you. You gonna see right quick. It's anyway for us. We gonna take care your friend, too. He no scare us. We make business this time."

The letter was signed, "The Boys." It was written in pencil on heavy paper and was almost illegible.

Friends of Ranieri, a sewer con-tractor, who appeared in court and before the grand jury in connection with the alleged extortions of Petitti and his gang, indicated they have been fearful that Petitti would be re-leased.

De Vito Refuses to Testify.

Michael De Vito, also a contractor, the father of ten children and the state's chief witness against Petitti in an extortion case, refused to tes-tify against the extortionist when the case came up a week ago. De Vito said he was fearful for his and his family's safety and that since Petitti had been convicted and already was serving 25 years, he would not appear in court against him.

A dozen or more of those involved as witnesses in one case or another appeared at the state's attorney's of-fice to reassure themselves that the Supreme court had really refused Pe-titti his freedom on bonds.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—[U. P.]—Re-broadcast of the MacDonald reception at the Battery in New York was heard clearly in London today. The noise of boat whistles and airplanes some-times drowned out the words of the announcer, but Londoners were as-sured that the premier and his daughter Ishbel seemed to be enjoying themselves immensely.

U. S. INDICTS 299 IN INDIANA FOR RUM, VICE PLOT

East Chicago Mayor and Chief of Police Named.

Defendants in Gary.

By Monday night the list of Gary defendants will be considerably swelled when United States Marshal Emmett Hall has completed service on the eighty warrants that will be issued over the week-end.

As soon as they are arrested, the Gary defendants will be taken to the marshal's office in Hammond where their bonds will be approved. The procedure will take most of Monday and probably Tuesday.

Asked about the suppressed indictments after they had been returned before Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick, Mr. Loomis would not comment except to say they held several "surprises." He added, however, that they contain two conspiracy indictments, one of which is thought to be a result of the so-called "Carling incident," wherein a truck load of beer bound for Chicago fell into the hands of the Gary police last February. Various stories are told of its disposal, the one given most credence being that it never was destroyed.

Give Rise to Many Rumors.

The last week has given rise to many rumors that a large number of Gary police were due to be indicted as a final act of the grand jury, and it is considered possible that one of the suppressed bills relates that and its link with the "Carling incident," which took place only four days before the Chicago Moran massacre.

The other conspiracy is the subject of countless reports in South Bend, names of the defendants ranging from Lake county officials to those of even more importance.

In the third week of the grand jury investigation Mr. Loomis felt the need of aid from Washington and in response to his request of Attorney General Mitchell, two of the latter's assistants, John S. Pratt and Oliver E. Pagan, came here to make up the conspiracy cases airtight. Before his departure for Washington today, Mr. Pratt announced that investigation of alleged multitudinous vote frauds in Lake county, a charge which precipitated the entire inquiry, would be continued on through the fall. More than 100 witnesses to the alleged violations have already been heard.

"The department of justice agents working on the frauds will continue," Mr. Pratt said. "They will coördinate evidence gotten in the past with whatever new can be obtained, will arrange it in logical sequence, and supplement each with the other.

Hale Seeks Reelection.

"Their conclusions, of course, will have to be analyzed and appraised, then presented to another grand jury if the facts warrant. In that event another jury will not be called before December."

This remark was considered significant due to the fact that next month elections will be held in both Gary and East Chicago. Mayor Hale is a candidate for reelection and has announced he would continue the race regardless of the charges against him. Gary has nominated R. O. Johnson, former mayor, who was convicted of a liquor conspiracy in 1925 along with some fifty others.

In figures, today's report contained 181 indictments, 53 of which were kept secret. In the Hammond district, including Lake county, there were 129 true bills. In the Fort Wayne district there were 30, leaving 22 in South Bend. Actual defendants in Fort Wayne were 58 with 28 in South Bend. The remainder, 213, were all from East Chicago, Indiana Harbor, and Gary.

Small Fry Bootleggers.

With Hale and Reigan, some fifty others, mostly alleged "small fry" bootleggers, are included in the East Chicago liquor conspiracy. The exact number cannot be determined until the names of the defendants to be arrested and the charges against them are made public. The 100 others are variously accused of minor liquor violations, Mann act violations, and on narcotic counts.

That the Gary conspiracy, when the identity of those to be arrested is made known, will be of a size comparable to the 1925 conspiracy is considered a certainty. Four years ago City Judge William Dunn, Prosecuting Attorney Clyde Hunter, and Sheriff Lew Barnes all went to prison with Johnson on booze charges.

CALLS CATHOLIC VOTERS TO CURB DRY EXTREMISTS

Archbishop Says It's Moral Problem.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—"Prohibition has become a serious moral problem," was the statement of Archbishop McNichols today in a pastoral letter urging all Catholics to register to vote. The letter will be read at all masses in the diocese on Sunday.

"As long as prohibition remained a political question or one of industrial efficiency the church had nothing to say," the archbishop explained. "But now that it is clear that it has given rise to a long train of evils—murder, dishonesty, hypocrisy, every form of bribery, the corruption of weak officials, the increase of intemperance where it was hitherto unknown, contempt of law, and, worst of all, the demoralizing of our youth—the church must in unmistakable terms condemn this moral wrong.

Calls for Common Sense.

"The conditions we face today impose the obligation on all good citizens—and they are in the vast majority—to unite in the holy resolve that the solution of the problems arising from the evils of prohibition shall be found by the common sense men and women of America regardless of race, creed, or color.

"It is a reflection on our patriotism and a sin against the fundamental moral code to allow the question to be settled by extremists. Let the sane majority insist that sanity shall prevail.

Would Curb Extremists' Power.

"Today we have too much evidence that active minority groups, extremists, propagandists incapable of weighing the general welfare of the community, who are driven either by fanatical zeal or by motive of self-interest, are exercising far too much power.

"The reflection that so many needless and positively harmful laws are being written into the statute books of our legislatures by the voters, in the final analysis rather than by the politicians, should scourge the consciences of the apathetic, the indolent, those preoccupied with business or pleasure, and the great class of those who consider voting at elections not worth while."

CAPTURE OF VESSEL INDICATES THERE IS NEW RUM ROW NOW

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Four men, running the customs lines off the Jersey coast in a seagoing dory, laden with $25,000 worth of rye whisky, surrendered boat and cargo today as a coast guard cutter fired three shots across her bow and came alongside with rifles trained on the smugglers.

Boatswain Carl Schmidt, a "top hand" of the coast guard rum fleet, made the capture after his bobbing craft had chased the rum runner for nearly half an hour. The capture in itself was regarded as of less importance than the fact that the presence of the smugglers indicated a new rum fleet probably is lying off shore.

Boat and liquor were taken to a coast guard pier in Staten island. The men aboard the craft gave their names as Charles Head, Frank Cadder, Harold Ward, and Harry Maloney.

Today's seizure and the capture last Tuesday of a British schooner loaded with 1,000 cases of whisky indicated to coast guard officials that a new rum fleet has replaced the group of "mother ships" which the dry agents believed they had put to flight.

Indiana Lawyers Resign as Disbarment Looms

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—The names of W. Lee Smith and Robert F. McNay, former high officials of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, were stricken from the register of attorneys before the Indiana Supreme court today. They submitted their resignations after disbarment proceedings were started as a result of their conviction in automobile theft conspiracy cases here.

HEAD OF CHURCH ANTI-RUM BOARD SCORES DRY LAW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 4.—"Prohibition is the most damnable thing that has ever been introduced into America. The harm it has caused far outweighs its good by a thousandfold."

This declaration was made by Archdeacon Joseph Dodshon, president of the Church Temperance Society of the United States, on leaving Southampton today aboard the Leviathan for New York.

The archdeacon warned England against the system of local option, which he described as the insidious means used to introduce prohibition into the United States. He declared that the American Church Temperance society is absolutely opposed to prohibition, the Episcopal church clergy vote showing three to one against it.

"Upon my return to America," he said, "I am going to advocate strongly legislation permitting the sale of light wines and beer. In England you are selling your jails; under prohibition we are building new ones. In the United States drunkenness is increasing, in England it is decreasing."

Mercury Hits 88 Degrees in Shade at Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—With a maximum temperature of 88 degrees today, one degree higher than yesterday, Los Angeles is experiencing an unusual heat wave. It was the hottest Oct. 4 since 1927. According to the United States weather bureau there will be continued warm weather for several days.

Bolivian Vice President and Ex-President Exiled

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Oct. 4.—Former President Ismael Montes was expatriated to Arica today. Vice President Abdon Saavedra left last night for Santa Cruz, where he will be held under detention. The country is calm and no trouble is feared.

SNOOPING DOOMS DRY LAW, WARNS SMEDLEY BUTLER

Likens Raids to Firing 16 Inch Gun at Birds.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Prevailing methods, according to Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, commandant of the marine base at Quantico, Va., have made prohibition "the grossest piece of class legislation in the country's history."

GEN. SMEDLEY BUTLER.

That opinion, the general told members of the President's law enforcement committee, is based on three years' study of the problem as director of public safety in Philadelphia and on his experience as commandant of the marine base at San Diego, Cal., and at Quantico, which he recently dried up by declaring the town, absolutely dependent on the marines for its existence, "out of bounds" for the units at that base.

Methods Are Ineffective.

Spasmodic drives on speakeasies and "hip slapping" enforcement methods were likened by the general to "using a 16 inch gun to shoot sparrows." And enforcement, he added, always will be ineffective to the point of failure "as long as enforcers snoop around after half pints on the hip and let the racketeers and king bootleggers do business unhindered."

Drawing upon his experiences in Philadelphia, the general recalled that in dozens of cases speakeasies raided and dismantled would be in operation again within a few hours after the raiders left the scene and that, in spite of forty indictments against such plants, he was unable to close breweries openly violating the law. Not one of the forty indictments was brought to trial.

Gen. Butler also recalled a case in which a Philadelphia policeman broke into a private residence and arrested eight men and women for illegal possession, and, after taking them to a police station, sought recognition for bravery because he had faced eight persons singlehanded. Instead of citing him for bravery, Gen. Butler said, he summarily dismissed the policeman "as a menace to society."

Prohibition, the general told the commission, can never be effective until more enforcement emphasis is directed against sources of bootleg supplies, and the allied bootleggers and politicians who control the traffic.

Gen. Butler appeared at the invitation of its chairman, George W. Wickersham, and remained closeted with the commission for more than two hours.

Kenosha Man Is Killed When Engine Hits Truck

George Smirl, 46 years old, 1118 58th street, Kenosha, was killed yesterday morning when he drove his automobile into the path of a freight engine of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad at Downey's crossing near the Great Lakes Naval station.

James Bondi, 22 years old, 628 South Marshfield avenue, suffered a fractured skull yesterday when his truck was struck by a Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific train at the crossing on route 22 west of Lake Forest. He was taken to Highland Park hospital.

GIRL UNDER FIRE FOR 3 HOURS IN PANTAGES CASE

Miss Pringle Sobs Out Her Attack Story.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Seventeen year old Eunice Pringle took two hours to tell a jury of six middleaged men and six women how she said she had been attacked by Alexander Pantages, 54 year old theater magnate. She was testifying in Judge Charles Fricke's court room. After she had sobbingly finished her story in response to District Attorney Buron Fitt's questions, relays of Pantages' defense attorneys, led by Jerry Geisler, cross-examined her for three hours.

At one time, on direct examination, Miss Pringle broke down and court was recessed for half an hour.

Pantages, who faces a one to fifty year sentence if the jury believes Miss Pringle and returns a verdict that he was guilty of the felony of assault, glared fixedly at the witness. The girl avoided his gaze. Pantages frequently conferred with his four lawyers. Some of the questions he suggested were directed to the witness.

Girl Dons Torn Dress.

Attorney Geisler insisted that Miss Pringle describe the condition of her garments before and after she had been taken into a small private room of Pantages' theater building last Aug. 3. He had her leave the witness stand, go into Judge Fricke's chambers, and put on the wrinkled and ripped red silk dress about the condition of which much of the testimony revolved.

Opening the preliminaries of an attack on Miss Pringle's recital of how Pantages had clapped his right hand over her mouth, thrown his left arm about her waist, and forced her to the floor while he ripped hooks and eyes off her dress, the prosecutor insisted that Judge Fricke allow them to clothe the girl again in the red dress on re-direct examination.

Questioned About Man.

Defense counsel devoted hours to questions about Miss Pringle's acquaintance with Nick Dunaev, 40 years old, who was managing a skit called "The Prince from Hollywood" in which Miss Pringle was featured. This was the skit Eunice Pringle wanted Pantages to book. The defense attorney elicited that Dunaev introduced Miss Pringle to Pantages and that later she had gone to Pantages' office in a downtown theater building many times to press her request that the skit be booked. Two of these visits were at night.

The defense, in its opening statement to the jury, offered to attempt to prove that a frameup was contrived to trap Pantages and extort money and that Dunaev and the girl consulted over an effort to obtain a large sum from the theater man.

Attorney Geisler told Judge Fricke the defense intends to use Dunaev as a witness.

Eunice Pringle's sworn statement of her experience with Alexander Pantages in a little private room of the latter's theater office on the afternoon of last Aug. 9 were related to the jury in response to District Attorney Buron Fitts' questions, as follows:

Q.—What happened after he took you into his private room? A.—His chair was about 16 inches from mine. He slid his arm along the back of my chair along my shoulders and said he admired me very much and wanted me to be his sweetheart.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I didn't want to be any sweetheart. He said he was crazy about me and hated his wife, and that he would give me anything if I would be his sweetheart. I told him I wasn't interested in his wife and would he please be a gentleman.

"Tried to Kiss Her."

Q.—Tell the jury what next happened. A.—He seemed to go sort of crazy—grabbed me tightly, pulled me to my feet, and tried to kiss me, but I pulled back and turned my head.

Q.—Go ahead. A.—I begged him to let me go, and when I tried to scream he clapped his hand over my mouth. He began kissing my throat and neck. And he forced me to the floor.

The witness said she fainted. When consciousness returned she said she tried to reach the door. Mr. Pantages said: "'I'll give you anything if you don't go.'" she testified.

"I got my hand on the door and got it partly opened," she said, "but he seized me and wouldn't let me out, and then I started to scream."

The witness said that she broke out of the room and ran down stairs into the street, where a police officer accompanied her back to the Pantages offices.

Perjury Cases Up.

Two perjury actions came up before the county grand jury today. One resulted in the summoning of Harold Dolly, a private detective employed in Pantages' behalf, and came about as result of an affidavit in the district attorney's hands in which an unnamed process server is alleged to have served a summons to a witness while at the same time remarking, "You'll be taken care of if you give Pantages a break."

The other resulted in questioning of John Conterno, who was a witness in favor of Mrs. Alexander Pantages in a manslaughter trial which resulted in a verdict against Mrs. Pantages last week. Mrs. Pantages is due in the courtroom of Judge Carlos Hardy tomorrow when her attorneys—who are now defending her husband—will present motions for a retrial.

According to physicians today, Mrs. Pantages "is still in a state of complete nervous collapse." She probably will be brought to court in a wheel chair.

MRS. BAUR HOME; HASN'T AN IDEA ABOUT POLITICS

After four months abroad, Mrs. Bertha Baur is far more familiar with economic conditions in Russia than with politics in Chicago, she declared yesterday on her return here. She said she hadn't heard a word of the rumor that she might be a candidate to succeed Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick as congresswoman at large from Illinois at the end of her present term. Mrs. McCormick has announced her candidacy for United States senator.

"There isn't anything I can say about politics, because I'm all out of touch with the situation," she explained. "Of course, as Republican national committeewoman, I couldn't indorse any candidate before the primary. Just now, after traveling more than 7,000 miles in Russia, I'm full of that subject. The women there are just as important as the men, provided they can prove their mental equality in any job."

Miss Rosemary Baur, whose debut in the present social season will occupy much of her mother's time from now on, stopped off at Bryn Mawr to visit friends, Mrs. Baur said.

FAIR ROB RESTAURATEUR OF $1,500.

While driving to the stockyards yesterday to purchase meats for his restaurant at 2408 West 16th street, George Ledcelis, 6034 South Campbell avenue, was forced to curb his car at 37th and Leavitt streets by two young gunmen who robbed him of $1,500 and escaped.

Evanston Restricts Its Buildings to 7 Stories

Evanston's determination to keep out skyscrapers resulted yesterday in a vote by the zoning commission of the suburb restricting all buildings to seven stories. The commission notified the Evanston council's zoning committee that all requests for permits to erect business structures or apartment buildings to a height of more than seven stories had been refused.

HIGHWAYS OPEN TO AUTOS AFTER BUILDING PERIOD

Finish Work on Several Main Routes.

BY HAL FOUST.

Several important through auto routes are open this week-end after having been closed for some time, due to construction. Construction jobs are being completed with the approach of cold weather, which will end the paving season.

The barriers were removed from Ridge avenue in Evanston for the first time in a year. The opening is opportune in that it will help serve the heavy traffic bound for the Northwestern university gridiron this afternoon. The thoroughfare was closed about twelve months ago when the elevated line was elevated. The street has been widened and repaved.

Halsted Street Widened.

In the southern end of Cook county a bad bottleneck caused by a crowding of detours has been relieved with the completion of the widening of Halsted street. The Dixie highway is blocked at three places, but all of these may now be missed by turning east from Western avenue on 159th street, south on Halsted to the Lincoln highway, and then back to Western.

Motorists taking this preferred route must ignore the Dixie highway detour signs this week-end because they have not been moved from the old congested routing south from 159th street on South Park avenue to the Dixie highway, south on the highway to the Joe Orr road, east to Halsted street, and thence south to the Lincoln highway and west again to the Dixie.

Higgins Road Opened.

Higgins road, closed for almost a year between the Cumberland and the River roads is open to traffic with the completion of a new bridge over the Des Plaines river. St. Charles road, widened and repaved between 19th avenue and 5th avenue in Maywood, is also ready to serve motorists this week-end.

South Cicero avenue paving has been opened between 159th and 183d streets. This leaves the stretch between 147th and 149th as the only part to be completed before Cicero will offer a direct connection between Ogden avenue and the Governor's highway, route 49. This improvement will be finished within a week or two.

The widened sections of Lake street, between Mannheim road and North avenue, and of the River road, between Rand road and Milwaukee avenue, will relieve the Sunday congestion tomorrow. The "Travel at Your Own Risk" signs are down.

Holiday drivers will find a new detour on Milwaukee avenue, due to the paving in the village of Wheeling. Traffic is directed east on Palatine road, north on Sanders road, and thence west on Dundee road to Milwaukee avenue.

The other Milwaukee avenue detour, where it is closed between Dempster street and Golf road, will probably be removed late next week.

Other detours are as follows:

North Avenue—Closed between Mannheim road and Thatcher avenue. This section of road will be open to traffic on or about Oct. 19.

Lawrence Avenue—Closed between River road and Mannheim road. Traffic is directed north over village street. This section will be open to traffic on or about Oct. 12.

Harlem Avenue—In poor condition between Diversey Park boulevard and North avenue. Traffic is advised to turn east on Diversey Park boulevard to Sayre avenue, south on Sayre avenue to North avenue, and then west on North avenue to Harlem avenue.

Crawford Avenue—Closed between Lincoln highway and Sauk trail. Traffic is directed east on Lincoln highway to Main street, south on Main street to Sauk trail, then west on Sauk trail to Crawford avenue.

Washington Street—Closed to traffic between Thatcher avenue and Forest avenue. Traffic is directed north over village streets.

Madison Street—Closed to traffic between 1st avenue, Maywood, and Thatcher avenue. Traffic is directed north on 1st avenue to Washington boulevard, east on Washington boulevard to Thatcher avenue, then south on Thatcher avenue to Madison street.

Dempster Street and Church Street—Closed at the sanitary district canal. Traffic is directed south on McCormick boulevard to Main street, east on Main street, and then north over a village street to Dempster street and Church street.

Work has been resumed on the Dempster and Church street bridges over the drainage canal following a year's idleness due to the financial difficulties of the sanitary district. The structures will be completed about Nov. 1.

3,000 BOOKS SEIZED AS "INDECENT" AND 3 PURVEYORS ARRESTED

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—More than 3,000 books were seized in three raids by the police today and three men were arrested on charges of selling indecent literature.

The men arrested are Samuel Roth, a writer, Max Roth, his brother, and Henry Zolinsky, described as a salesman for the Roths.

According to the police, the books seized numbered dozens of titles, among them "Three Times Tried," by Oscar Wilde; "Painted Veils," by James Huneker; "Ulysses," by James Joyce; "My Life and Loves" and "An Old Man in Love," by Frank Harris; "Lady Chatterley's Lover" and "Sun," by D. H. Lawrence, and "Flesh," by Clement Wood.

Samuel Roth is the former publisher of Two World's magazine, which was sued by James Joyce in connection with the serial publication in that magazine of his "Ulysses."

ORDERS INQUIRY INTO COLORADO PRISON MUTINY

Warden Receives Backing of Governor.

into the barricaded cell house on threat of death.

He also declared the convicts' entire arsenal consisted of four revolvers and one rifle. The revolvers, he said, were smuggled into the prison, while the rifle was seized from a guard on watch in the crow's nest in the dining hall. Other guards inside the prison, he said, were unarmed.

He revealed that prison authorities were aware that arms had been smuggled into the prison, and had been conducting a vigorous search for them, even tearing up masonry at spots suspected of concealment.

Crawford also announced that none of the prisoners at the penitentiary had escaped in the confusion.

Why He Wouldn't Compromise.

The warden in a formal statement today gave the reasons which led him to sacrifice the lives of prison guards in preference to capitulation to demands of the mutinous convicts. His statement follows:

"We feel, of course, that we adopted the only policy open to us under the circumstances. Out of hand, a half dozen desperate criminals cowed and terrorized the rest and delivered to the prison authorities successive ultimatums threatening the murder of valued guards. To have capitulated to the demands would have been to have sacrificed all the guards held prisoner by the convicts, because these guards unquestionably would have been killed in the break for liberty. They were to have been used as a human shield for the escaping criminals. We could not compromise.

"We adopted the only course open to us and we know it will contribute to law and order, whereas the other would only have made for further mutiny and insurrection."

Gov. W. H. Adams arrived here tonight, inspected the destruction wrought at the prison, and warmly upheld the warden's refusal to treat with the mutineers.

"In my opinion," he said," the warden showed the very best judgment and, to my mind, he saved a great many lives by pursuing the policy he adopted at the outset of the mutiny."

How the Mutiny Ended.

The end of the night of carnage and bloodshed was curiously tame. An armored car had arrived from Denver and advanced on the cell block and at the same time a last plea by the mutineers for a parley had been refused. There was a temporary lull in the siege. Then the sun came up and one of the captive guards, O. E. Earl, was seen coming out of the cell house in its dim light. He brought word that the leaders of the revolt had died by their own hands.

Guards promptly surrounded the cell house and the mutiny was ended as the besieged convicts, more than 150 of them, marched from the cell house.

One by one, their arms above their head, the men emerged into the gray of the early morning, to face a semi-circle of guns held by national guardsmen, prison guards and citizens. They were lined up against the wall. Armed guards then entered the cell house.

Cell House a Shambles.

If a tornado had swept through the place it could not have presented a more desolate picture. The concrete floor was splotched with blood. Here the guards dragged out of the cells the bodies of the slain convicts. Danny Daniels, the leader, lay dead in a corner of the building.

Two feet away lay a guard, features smeared with blood, and at his head lay another guard.

The darkened cells were in confusion. Mattresses lay scattered on the floors and more than one cell had a supply of bread, snatched from the dining room to insure food for a long siege when ther iot began.

The end of the riot came after half a day and a night of furious fighting during which dynamite, barrages of machine gun and rifle bullets and tear gas bombs failed to vanquish the prisoners.

How Seven Guards Died.

Three guards were killed at the outbreak of rioting yesterday and four more during the night. Those killed in the early rioting were Roy Brown, Walter Rinker, and Elmer G. Erwin. John J. Eelles, Robert A. Wiggins, Charles Sheperd and John W. McClelland were slaughtered in the cell house.

The convict dead included Daniels, A. H. Davis, George [Red] Riley, Melvin Majors, James Pardue, and Albert Morgaridge.

Pardue was wounded in the abdomen during the early rioting. Removed to cell house No. 3 by the other convicts, he was found this morning with a bullet through his head, fired by one of the other convicts to end his suffering.

Three of the other ringleaders were found dead in the same cell, powder burns on their temples bearing mute testimony to shots fired at close range.

The bodies of Guards Shepherd and McClelland were found in the cell house, bound hand and foot. Both had been shot through the head.

Close estimates fix the time of the suicides of the riot leaders at 4 a. m., but it was not until day broke, all hour and a half later, that Earl came into the prison yard and informed the attacking forces.

The mutiny among the prisoners broke out Thursday noon in the main dining hall and spread with lightning speed.

Pardue, a convict with a long criminal record, armed with a revolver smuggled inside the walls, shot and killed Elmer Erwin, on guard in the crow's nest overlooking the dining hall.

Pardue and Danny Daniels then seized Erwin's rifle and keys. They liberated other prisoners and killed Guards Roy Brown and Walter Rinker.

Within fifteen minutes the rioters were in complete control of the prison. They disarmed the remaining guards and locked them in cell house No. 3.

Police and firemen arriving at the prison gates were driven off by armed convicts.

The night of carnage followed, with killing of the hostage guards, with the use of dynamite by the besiegers, and finally with the employment of an armored car which advanced on the cell block. This seemed to break down the morale of the mutineers. The suicide of the ringleaders followed soon afterward.

PRIEST JUGGLED WITH DEATH TWICE DURING ATTACK ON PRISON

Canon City, Colo., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Father Patrick O'Neil, Catholic priest of the order of St. Benedict, who twice risked his life last night to plant dynamite charges against the wall of the prison cellhouse in which nearly 200 rebellious convicts were barricaded, came closer to death each time than watchers on the outside knew.

On the first trip, as he was carrying in the dynamite, trailing a fuse wire behind, some one stepped on the wire and jerked the dynamite from his hands. Father O'Neil, who stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs 215 pounds, made a lightning one handed catch of the explosive before it touched the ground.

On the second trip a machine gun bullet struck the package of dynamite, but it did not explode.

"Why did I plant the dynamite?" he said tonight. "Well, some of those guards in that cellhouse were good Catholics, and any how, somebody had to do it."

REPORT ST. PAUL PASSENGERS ARE THEFT VICTIMS

Reports reached the police last night that a number of passengers on two Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific trains had been robbed of money, valuables and baggage by a prowler during a few minutes stop over in Milwaukee. The losses after investigation were put at $145 and two pieces of baggage, but later Chief Larry Benson of the special railroad police force, said only one bag could be said definitely to have been taken and that the entire loss would not be above $50.

In the earlier reports B. M. Marshman of 2619 Hampton court; H. M. Nichols, 104 South Michigan avenue; L. A. Gerber of 1604 Conway building, and Gordon Tucker of Minneapolis, Minn., were said to have been among those who lost valuables. None of these could be reached last evening, however.

HONOR MEMORY OF GEN. PULASKI IN TABLET HERE

A memorial tablet dedicated to Gen. Casimir Pulaski, Polish hero of the American revolution, will be unveiled in the rotunda of the federal building on Oct. 11, it was announced yesterday by Anthony Czarnecki, collector of customs, who is chairman of the Chicago branch of the American-Pulaski sesquicentennial committee. Permission has been granted by President Hoover for the unveiling of the tablet, Mr. Czarnecki said. Gen. Pulaski died on Oct. 9, 1779, of battle wounds. On Oct. 13 a Pulaski memorial service will be held at Soldiers' field.

PRISON EXPERT SAYS IDLENESS CAUSED MUTINY

Serious Overcrowding Is Also a Factor.

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—In the handbook of American prisons, advance copies of which were made public today, prison conditions at Canon City, Colo., are commented upon at some length. The handbook, edited by Paul W. Garrett, says:

"Serious overcrowding and idleness, a situation common to many prisons, were found at Canon City, a condition brought about not so much by the prison officials themselves, but more through a shortsighted legislative policy.

Road Work Abolished.

"Until recently Colorado stood in the front line of states providing suitable employment for prison inmates through road construction. The abolishment of this brings about a deplorable condition of idleness.

"The prison needs a return of the road work program and general expansion along employment lines. In this connection it is interesting to note that Colorado is the only state with a part time board on a salary basis. Idleness cannot be properly charged to local officials; responsibility rests with the state officials and legislators.

Warden Not Responsible.

"The present warden has abolished forms of punishment used by previous administrations, and when the institution was visited a little over a year ago the morale appeared greatly improved over the previous administration.

"It appears, therefore, that the outbreak was primarily because of conditions for which the warden could not be held responsible."

Lindy in Belize to Begin Search of Jungle by Air

BELIZE, British Honduras, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Col. Lindbergh, continuing his 7,000 mile Caribbean trip, landed here at 2:30 p. m. today. He left Guatemala City for Belize at 11:15 a. m. This Central American town will be the starting point for Col. Lindbergh's exploration of the Yucantan jungles by air in search of remains of the ancient Mayan civilization.

NAB "PEEPING TOM" AT NURSES' HOME; IDENTIFIED BY GIRLS

Roland Ross, 28 years old, assistant baker in the Cook County Home of Nurses at 509 South Honore street, was taken into custody last evening as the "Peeping Tom" who on several occasions recently has frightened the young women by peeping into their rooms. Sergt. Thomas Connelly and his squad found the young man in the alley behind the home. Nearby stood a ladder, which he is alleged to have used to mount to the window ledges. Taken inside, Ross was identified by Alice Bomark, Maxine Sears, Olive Rees, Helen Snyder, and Virginia Fenlon as having peeped at them on several occasions.

Seven persons were injured and some sixty others hurled from their seats when at 6:15 o'clock last evening the last two coaches of an Illinois Central train from the Hawthorne race track split a switch in the yards at 15th street and Indiana avenue, climbed a parallel track on a concrete shelf and were dragged over a six foot wall before the coupling broke.

Slamming against a string of box cars on a track two levels below, the derailed coaches were saved from probable destruction in which some of the passengers might have been killed, according to railroad officials. The train of nine wooden cars, coming in over an Illinois Central branch known as the St. Charles air line, was loaded to capacity when it left the race track at 5:35 p. m.

The injured, taken to St. Luke's hospital in police ambulances, are: Miss Blanche Towls, 35 years old, 2930 Sewell street; Miss Adelaide Weaver, 27 years old, 4200 Hazel avenue; Joseph J. Butler, 78 years old, 3748 North Damen avenue; Louis Paul, 32 years old, 714 Washington street, Evanston; Louis Economakis, 30 years old, 2154 Montrose avenue; Froman Smith, 51 years old, 6137 Kenwood avenue, and Otto Fendt, 28 years old, 2240 Giddings street, a city fireman, injured in extricating passengers from the coaches.

Fifty passengers aboard a train of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific road, due in the Union station at 9:30 p. m. from Madison, Wis., sustained a severe jolting last night when the locomotive tender and five of the train's six coaches were derailed by a defective switch just before reaching the Mayfair station at Cicero and Montrose avenues. Two hundred yards of track were ripped up.

Mrs. Wilson Profits in Few Months.

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Since her incarceration in the Women's penitentiary on Welfare island, half a year ago, Mrs. Esther Evans Wilson, Washington society matron and noted as an explorer and big game hunter, has "cleaned up" $300,000 in Wall street, it was learned today.

ESTHER EVANS WILSON.

Mrs. Wilson was convicted of second degree assault for shooting her husband, Dallett H. Wilson, prominent lawyer and advisory member of the Republican national committee, in his office in the Heckscher building the evening of March 29, 1928. For a while Wilson hovered between life and death, but he eventually recovered from the wounds.

The municipal parole board, which has jurisdiction in cases where a judge imposes an indeterminate term of from six months to three years, fixed Mrs. Wilson's imprisonment at one year.

Since she arrived on Welfare island Mrs. Wilson has kept very much to herself, refusing to associate with the other inmates. At her request she has been placed in a cell by herself and there she has devoted herself to writing and studying, and also to the daily scrutiny of the stock market.

Some of the stocks which she bought early this year have gone up as much as 240 points, according to a business associate, and she has displayed unusual shrewdness in picking securities that went up and in "unloading" at the right time.

Mrs. Wilson is 49. She was the first of her sex to lead a major hunting expedition into the interior of Africa and was also credited with having been farther north than any white woman—within 10 degrees of the north pole. She and her husband separated a year before the shooting.

POLICE OFFER TO WAIVE RIGHTS IN GRANADY CASE

Would 'Tell Grand Jury Story of Killing.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Elijah Gilbert and Tony Grieto, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years each in the penitentiary; Frank Perry, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory; Dennis O'Walker, burglary, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge John J. Sullivan.

William Stewart, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge Joseph B. David.

George Mallon, Fred Wilson, and Andrew Johnson, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge William N. Gemmill.

Indications last night were that extralegal procedure would be resorted to in order to let the October grand jury decide when it is impaneled next week whether or not sufficient evidence exists to warrant bringing Lieut. Phillip Carroll and his detective bureau squad before a trial jury in the Criminal court. The case is to be presented by the special prosecuting staff of Frank J. Loesch. The policemen have been identified as having participated in the wild chase through the 20th ward on primary day in April, 1928, when Octavius Granady, colored opponent of Morris Eller for ward committeeman, was shot dead.

State's Attorney Swanson announced that the Carroll matter would be taken before the new grand jury "as soon as possible." At the same time he said he did not believe it would be improper for the lieutenant and his witnesses to appear before the jury.

Rests with Loesch.

The matter, however, rests entirely in the hands of Loesch and his assistants, Charles C. Lounsbury and William Haynes. Swanson said he would not oppose such a request that the police appear before the grand jury.

Lieut. Carroll and his squad members, Patrolmen Michael Shannon, George Tapling, Walter Bailey, and Michael Loughney, responded promptly through Attorneys W. W. Smith and Milton Smith with a letter not only to Swanson but to Chief Justice D. J. Normoyle and the prospective grand jurors. They offered to waive all immunity and to present themselves before the jury to stand any cross-examination of their testimony that they are innocent of any part in the Granady shooting.

The usual procedure before a grand jury is to allow only the state's witnesses to testify at an ex parte hearing. It is rare that a defendant or any of his witnesses are allowed before a jury to give the defense side.

State's Attorney Swanson, First Assistant John E. Northup, Chief Investigator Pat Roche and Special Prosecutors Lounsbury and Haynes were in conference for more than two hours yesterday. When the conference ended Swanson issued the following statement:

"It has been decided to present the Carroll matter to the grand jury at the earliest opportunity. This case has been handled by Mr. Loesch and his assistants and will be handled by them before the grand jury. This is in accordance with my preelection pledge that I would not in any way interfere with the activities of Mr. Loesch in his vote fraud or Granady murder investigations."

Mr. Swanson said that in view of the fact that Deputy Commissioner John Stege is convinced the lieutenant and his squad are innocent he would consider it proper for the policemen to appear before the grand jury.

Refuse Court Hearing.

Swanson said the proposition of submitting the matter to a Municipal court judge on a preliminary hearing was discussed, but this was turned down by the Loesch assistants, who said they feared at this time to bring their witnesses out in the open, because of past efforts at intimidation.

"Lieut. Carroll and all of the men of his squad have rendered honest and efficient service in the police department and assert that they had nothing to do with the killing and at the time of its perpetration they were engaged in an honest endeavor to suppress crime and rioting in the neighborhood," reads the letter to Swanson from Attorney Smith.

"In view of the fact that my clients are police officers and consider themselves as public servants, it is their desire that they be permitted to appear before the grand jury.

"They want to appear in order that complete justice to the people as well as to themselves may be done, and to that end they desire to assure you that they will waive immunity—go before the jury and frankly, without reservation, discuss the matter at issue and answer any questions that may be propounded to them."

Mr. Loesch was out of the city yesterday, not to return until next week.

LINES BLAMED FOR DELAY ON CAR AGREEMENT

'Deadlock' Group Reports in Finance Plans.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

A large part of the blame for the delay in the negotiations for a transportation settlement was placed upon the surface and elevated lines yesterday by the report of the "deadlock committee." This committee, composed of Dean Charles M. Thompson of the University of Illinois school of commerce, Victor Olander, secretary of the state federation of labor; John A. Carroll, head of several south side banks, and John Stuart, president of the Quaker Oats company, was appointed Aug. 15 to work out a transit financial structure after the negotiations had reached an impasse.

This committee reports that it is impracticable, if not impossible, to solve the four financial problems referred to it until a reorganization plan has been worked out to consolidate the existing transit facilities. The members assert several times it is the obligation of the existing companies to select a reorganization committee to formulate a consolidation agreement.

It's Up to Companies.

After showing the necessity for a reorganization committee, the report says:

"This committee is therefore of the opinion that the working out of such an agreement should be immediately undertaken by the representatives of the transit interests."

Two other major recommendations are also made, as follows:

"There should be a determination of the surface, elevated and bus extensions which should be made."

"The character, extent and location of subways should be decided."

The responsibility for a lack of a decision on these two matters rests jointly with the city, companies, and citizens' committee. These subjects were referred to a group of engineers representing these three agencies early last July.

Sets Up Guide Posts.

Regarding a financial structure, the Thompson committee set up a number of guide posts. It spent two weeks listening to the best fiscal experts obtainable, as well as a number of others. Those guide posts should be of aid in testing out any scheme proposed.

"It was practically the unanimous opinion of all of the witnesses," reads the report, "that the financial structure and ordinance provisions must as a fundamental necessity make adequate provision to obtain the large amount of money absolutely essential to the procurement of extensions, additions and improvements, without which the system cannot furnish first class service to the public.

"Any failure in this respect would either increase the discount at which securities could be sold to the public or add to the interest rate on such securities, either method reflecting itself in the cost of money, which would become a charge against operating expense to be paid by the car rider. That view is unescapably true. To procure this money the new company cannot be unduly restricted as to its earnings or as to securities which it may issue with the approval of the public commission authorized by law to deal with such matters.

Finds Earnings Justified.

"On the other hand, liberal treatment by such commission may result in earnings which are justified as a basis for corporate credit, and which should be allowed and maintained for that purpose, but the distribution of which as dividends may be excessive."

While much more is said on the subjects, the above summarizes what the committee considers the most important aspect of the settlement, the necessity for a sound financial plan, the earnings of the new company, and the rate of return and the kind of securities it may or should have.

As to the method of financing subway—to be built and owned by the city and operated by the new company, the committee says that the "answer is clearly dependent upon two considerations."

It goes on: "The first prerequisite is a decision on the location, character and extent of these subways. Secondly, the moneys now available and hereafter to be made available to the city for this purpose must be carefully estimated in advance." The validity of special assessments for subways is not free from doubt and will almost certainly be affected by the character of the subways. Upon this character and location will also depend the willingness of contiguous property to acquiesce in special assessments or contribute voluntarily to their cost.

Must Determine Location.

"No plan has been suggested to us for the financing of subways which does not involve the use of the city traction fund and of some percentage of gross receipts of the new company to be paid the city as compensation for the use of the streets. Clearly this committee can make no definite recommendations as to the financing of subways until their character, location, and extent have been determined. All that can be said now is that if the city is to be obligated to provide subways its obligation cannot exceed its demonstrable financial ability."

The Thompson group suggests that the rate of fare be left to the commission to determine, "as a matter of law as well as sound policy."

On rate of return the report says: "It being clear that the first consideration is the obtaining of necessary new money, it is also clear that the return upon the securities to be issued for new money must be such as to make those securities attractive to the investing public. Furthermore, it is equally clear that the investor in these securities must be adequately protected.

Conditions Constantly Changing.

"What may be necessary for this purpose is dependent upon conditions that are constantly changing. We therefore believe that the public commission must be left free to regulate in accordance with its best judgment the provisions that may affect the investment under which such securities may be issued. Indeed, provisions which would prevent the company from raising the new money essential for giving good service would probably be held invalid as an impairment of the police power of the state."

This report was made public as soon as received by James Simpson of the citizens' committee. He will probably transmit it officially today or Monday to the council local transportation committee, which asked for aid in eliminating the deadlock over the financial aspects of the ordinance.

Four Coffins End to End in Unusual Setting.

Bending on creaking knees the old man of the mountains prayed. It was a prayer such as one seldom hears in such a setting. The mill folks called it "powerful." Even the high visiting ministers from the labor colleges of the north bowed before the ancient's oratory.

At last he was done. The weeping had ceased. A spellbound crowd of mourners had been strangely comforted.

"Our Martyrs Massacred."

Ross, as master of ceremonies, again spoke. The little Oxford educated union worker's clipped words sounded out of place after Preacher Queen's booming oratory.

"The devil is in this mill," said Ross, "and our dead martyrs were massacred. They died innocent and the world is with them if the law is not."

A dozen men and girls from the mill took their places and opened hymn books marked "Millennial Revival." The first song was "Nearer My God to Thee."

Then the mill choir sang:

We read of a place called heaven,
A home beyond the skies.
How beautiful heaven must be
Where no one ever dies.

James Myers, industrial secretary of the Federated Council of Churches, was introduced. The hill folks did not know how to receive him. He spoke in the polished language of an educated easterner.

"You must put out of your heart and minds all thought of bitterness, hate, or revenge," he counseled them. There were a few weak "Amens."

"O, God, yes," cried a woman seated behind young Bryson's coffin.

"You must forgive those who have so deeply wronged you," continued the easterner, "for God is concerned about labor and hours and working conditions even though mill owners are not."

"Massacre to End Tyranny."

Dr. Myers was followed by Frances J. Gorman, first vice president of the United Textile Workers union and ranking A. F. of L. official attending the funeral.

Gorman spoke frankly. After his first words it was apparent that the textile union is militant and that pacifism has no place in its ranks.

"The massacre of the mill workers in Marion is the most disgraceful event ever perpetrated on men in the union movement," he said. "I bring to you people the sympathy and support of organized labor. The Marion massacre means the beginning of the end of industrial slavery in the south. These men died so that the union might live."

Tom Tippett, most militant of the union leaders here, strode to the front of the speaker's stand. "Let me tell some of these folks something," he began, aiming his remarks toward Dr. Myers. "You ask me to have love in my heart for people of this kind who did this thing. What kind of men do you think we are? We must keep faith with these martyred men who gave their lives for the union. What is our duty now? To pledge our faith to them. These men died fighting for freedom from the cotton mills of the south. Our fight has just begun. All over the south thousands will turn to our cause."

Mill Stock Owner Talks.

One of the most earnest addresses of the day was delivered by L. L. Jenkins, an Asheville banker and mill stock owner. He was an arbiter in the last strike here. He spoke with tears in his eyes.

"My people, for you are my people," he said, "I have in my pockets evidence that I did everything in my power to avoid this tragedy. As any mill stock owner might say, I say that I feel what I am today I owe to people like you. It is natural that I should be here today to mingle my tears with yours. It matters not to me what the world may say, I love you. You are my people. I have not slept for two days. I mourn with you."

Preacher Pool prayed. An undertaker stepped forward and opened the coffins. The crowd in single file began to pass by the open coffins. The mill choir sang a funeral dirge. Old and young alike, they filed slowly past the four biers. There were tiny red rosebuds pinned to the white plush of the opened coffin tops. About the planks on which the coffins rested were native wild flowers. Cosmos, dahlias, peonies, roses, and bachelor buttons were woven into home made wreaths. Red mountain sage was twined about the coffins. On top of each was an elaborate wreath of artificial flowers. There were wax lilies and cloth carnations.

The south's first mass union funeral was over. The episode at the mill gate was ended for the time. Marion had buried her dead.

Testify Against Sheriff's Men.

Marion, N. C., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Eyewitnesses of the riot at the Marion Manufacturing company's mill on Wednesday, which cost the lives of five men, today testified at the state's preliminary investigation that the shots fired had come from Sheriff O. F. Adkins and his group of deputies.

Judge W. F. Harding of the North Carolina Superior court, acting as a committing magistrate, began the long task of trying to ascertain the facts.

Douglas Eller, an Asheville newspaper reporter, testified that the "sound of the shots" had come from where the sheriff and his men were stationed. Under cross-examination he said he had taken "about two drinks" before the trouble. The reporter said that when the gunfire began he "ran around in circles and finally got behind a rain barrel."

DIES AS RESULT OF FRACTURE.

Frank Eran, 37 years old, 123 Throop street, died at the county hospital yesterday from an infection developing from a fracture on his left leg.

HIS SEPTEMBER MORN DANCE SHOCKS COP; JUDGE FINES HIM $200

Having journeyed from his home at 941 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, to Douglas Park, on the southwest side, and having stripped to his original integument, Erwin Schoepfer, 23 years old, and of a gambling inclination, got his seasons mixed. He thought it was spring and that spring dances were in order.

"I saw his step behind a bush," said a policeman yesterday in Judge Fred W. Elliott's court. "The next minute he came leaping and dancing out without—without—well, your honor, he was in the original wrapper.

"It was shocking, your honor. Some nice old ladies turned their faces away; and a couple of flappers laughed fit to split their sides. Myself, I was amazed, your honor, at the antics of him——"

"Two hundred and costs!" snapped Judge Elliott.

"'Twill be spring by the time he gets out and dancing more in order," said the bailiff.

SENATE TO SCAN PROFITS TARIFF GIVES IMPORTERS

Chicago Stores Are on G. O. P. Senators' List.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Profits of importers as well as manufacturers are to be scrutinized in connection with consideration of tariff legislation. A lengthy list of importers made up by Republican members of the finance committee was transmitted today to the treasury department with a view to obtaining the same facts relative to their profits or losses as shown by income tax returns as have been demanded by the Democrats of the committee with respect to several hundred manufacturers.

Included in the list of importers are most of the leading department stores and mail order houses. The department stores have been among those opposing increases in duties and it is the purpose of the Republican protectionists to show they are making excessive profits on imported goods.

Chicago Firms on List.

Chicago companies in the list include Marshall Field & Co., Mandel Brothers, Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., the Fair, Montgomery Ward & Co., Sears Roebuck & Co., Pitkin & Brooks, Arthur Schiller & Son, Laidlaw, Bros., and Prang company.

The John Wanamaker company, F. W. Woolworth & Co., and S. S. Kresge company are among companies listed from other cities. The Republicans included the W. T. Rawleigh & Co. of Freeport, Ill., and W. T. Rawleigh as an individual. Mr. Rawleigh, a patent medicine manufacturer, is financing what is known as the Rawleigh tariff bureau which is furnishing information for the use of senate radicals in their attacks upon high duties.

Asks Who Made Up List.

Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], a member of the finance committee, questioned Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the committee, as to what particular senators made up the list of importers. Senator Smoot refused to furnish this information.

The senate approved amendments to administrative provisions of the tariff bill, including those relating to the makeup of the tariff commission. The finance committee amendments providing for continuation of a bipartisan commission rather than a nonpartisan commission, as provided by the house bill.

HUNT FOR $500,000 IN HOME OF DEAD SUSPECT FAILS

After invoking the aid of the Probate court, police yesterday searched two safes in the home of Eddie Leonard, alias Lutornski, alleged postoffice robber, at 4720 Wentworth avenue. They hoped to find $500,000 in stamps taken from the St. Paul, Minn., postoffice, but were unsuccessful.

Leonard died Thursday and his identity was revealed yesterday. Lieut. John A. Ronan of the detective bureau immediately asked Probate Judge Henry Horner to put the public administrator, Percy B. Coffin, in charge of Leonard's estate. The judge empowered Lieut. Ronan and Jack Rubens, investigators, for the administrator, to search Leonard's effects.

Leonard was said to have had a long record as a postoffice robber.

SENATE LIKELY TO CONFIRM ALL OF FARM BOARD

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Confirmation of appointments of all members of the federal farm board seemed probable today as the senate committee on agriculture concluded hearings. W. F. Schilling of Minnesota, the representative of dairy interests on the board, was the last witness and succeeded in escaping much of the hostile criticism which has greeted most of the members.

The committee will meet some time next week to act on a recommendation to the senate as to confirmation of the eight members. While members of the board have been subjected to a constant fire of attack, the questioning has been directed largely by the same group and it is doubtful if a majority of the committee will vote against the appointees.

Those against whom the most hostility have been displayed are: Alexander Legge of Chicago, the chairman; S. R. McKelvie of Nebraska, the wheat member, and Carl Williams of Oklahoma, the cotton member.

Albania Breaks Relations with Turkey; Envoy Quits

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TIRANA, Albania, Oct. 4.—The Albanian government today informed the Turkish government at Angora that it is breaking off diplomatic relations and recalling its minister. The reason for this is that Turkey up to the present time has not recognized the kingdom of Albania. Albania was a republic until a year ago when former President Ahmed Beg Zogu had himself elected king.

WOMAN CAFE OWNER POINTS OUT COP AS ONE WHO SHOT HER

Policeman Ermel Price, 33 years old, was suspended yesterday after Mrs. Ida Schechter, 40 years old, proprietor of a restaurant at 3104 Roosevelt road, identified him as having shot and wounded her.

Mrs. Schechter told Capt. Thomas Pilkington a policeman came to her restaurant at 4 a. m. She said he appeared to have been drinking, pounded loudly on the door, and when she refused to let him in he fired a shot through the door which struck her in the foot. She said she recognized the policeman as the one who was on the night beat in her neighborhood last month.

Capt. Pilkington, after looking up the records, called Policeman Price in. The policeman denied he was the one who shot Mrs. Schechter. He and seven other policemen were then taken to Mrs. Schechter's room in Mount Sinai hospital and she pointed out Price.

Poles Seize Alleged 1921 Plotter Against Pilsudski

WARSAW, Oct. 4.—(AP)—An alleged would-be assassin of Marshal Pilsudski, Polish minister of war, has been seized at Lvoff by Polish police after he had remained safely in the United States for eight years. Te was identified as Jarosiav Chiz, and charged with an attempt against the marshal's life in 1921. He had returned only recently under a false passport.

WOOL GROWERS PLAN WITH LEGGE FOR SALES CO-OP

BY PAUL POTTER.

Representatives of cooperative marketing agencies for wool and mohair producers of the nation sat around a conference table here yesterday discussing with Chairman Alexander Legge and four other federal farm board members the plans for a huge centralized sales corporation.

The entire first day was taken up with consideration of tentative proposals, and obtaining the sentiment of the thirty-six farm marketing cooperative leaders present. After reaching final agreement on the corporation's fundamental type and activities this morning, an organization committee of three growers will be appointed to draft articles of incorporation and by-laws.

Both federal farm board members and the sheep growers indicated yesterday that they were expecting a strong, centralized stabilizing corporation similar to that approved yesterday for grain farmers. It is to be a federation of regional wool and mohair growers' associations, now in competition with each other, to enable them to stabilize marketing.

"The formation of the National Wool and Mohair Cooperative Marketing agency is expected to be brought about through the federation of existing collective selling agencies," said C. B. Denman of Farmington, Mo., live stock representative on the federal farm board.

The wool and mohair industry, representing annual sales of more than $120,000,000, holds a rather peculiar position in American agriculture, Mr. Denman said, in that there is no surplus wool or mohair produced.

DEMAND CHICAGO FINISH SEWAGE PLANT IN 6 YEARS

Foes Complete Plea on Water Diversion.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Arguments in the Chicago water diversion controversy were concluded today before Charles Evans Hughes, special master for the Supreme court.

On Oct. 17 the last of the millions of words of testimony that will make up the complete record of the hearings will be in the hands of the special master and Mr. Hughes will begin the task of framing a decree for putting into effect the Supreme court's recent decision that Chicago has no legal right to a water diversion for sanitation purposes.

In preparing this decree for submission to the Supreme court for its approval, Master Hughes will have the opportunity of choosing between the "reasonable" program for sewage treatment plant construction at Chicago outlined by James M. Beck, former solicitor general, and others of the Illinois and sanitary district legal staff, or the "terms" demanded by counsel for the six lake states opposing any water diversion at Chicago.

Ask for Fifteen Years.

Mr. Beck and Attorneys Edmund D. Adcock and Walter Beebe of the sanitary district staff advocated a decree which would allow Chicago fifteen years to complete a sewage treatment program which would provide for complete treatment of all the sewage of that city. They advised the special master to recommend that the Supreme court leave the question of fixing a permanent water diversion for navigation conditions in the Chicago river in the hands of the war department.

The lake states' program for Chicago, as recommended in final form before Master Hughes today, goes even further than Illinois counsel had apprehended they would suggest for ending the long years of litigation that have marked the attempts of Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New York to prevent the diversion of water at Chicago. It provided that the water diversion should be halted completely and permanently on Dec. 31, 1935. On that date the lake states would require Chicago to have its entire sewage treatment program completed. In addition, they would force Chicago, at that city's expense, to flush Chicago river sewage, after treatment, into Lake Michigan.

An apparently contradictory plank in the lake states' program would require the Supreme court to enjoin the sanitary district from so polluting the Chicago river or Lake Michigan as to constitute an obstruction to navigation.

Pertinent paragraphs in the lake states' suggested decree were:

1. That on and after Dec. 31, 1935, the state of Illinois and Chicago should be ordered to desist from abstracting any of the waters of the great lakes-St. Lawrence system or watershed [including the domestic pumpage of Chicago] through the Chicago drainage canal and its auxiliary channels, or by means of any other method.

2. That after that date they should be ordered to refrain from so polluting the Chicago river and the auxiliary navigable channels of the sanitary district or any other navigable water by the discharge of sewage or otherwise so as to create an obstruction to or an interference with the navigable capacity of any of the navigable waters of the United States.

Demand Progressive Reduction.

The decree provided for progressive reduction of the diversion as the treatment works were completed. The diversion would be cut to 6,500 cubic second feet, plus domestic pumpage, on April 1, 1930; to 5,000 feet on Dec. 31, 1932; and 3,000 feet on Dec. 31, 1933.

Counsel for the sanitary district said that adoption of the complainant program would make useless the sanitary district canals, constructed at a cost approaching 100 millions, and would force the construction of new sewage treatment plants and disease preventive works which would place a tax burden of more than one billion dollars upon the shoulders of Chicago tax payers. Fulfillment of that portion of the suggested decree which requires dumping of Chicago sewage into the lake without obstructing navigation was declared impossible.

The lake states' decree was framed by Raymond T. Jackson, special assistant attorney general of Wisconsin, and Newton D. Baker, general counsel for the Lake Carriers' association, which is dominated by the United States Steel corporation, a part of the five million dollar aggregation of steel, shipping, and water power interests behind the attack on the Chicago diversion.

Oppose War Department Hand.

In concluding the final argument for the lake states today, Mr. Baker demanded a rigid decree which would make it impossible for Chicago to escape compliance with the Supreme court's decision. He opposed Attorney Beck's argument that the question of fixing the amount of water diversion should be left to the war department.

"The complainant states do not want to be remitted to the secretary of war because they know the limitations of his authority," Mr. Baker said. "The court has declared what our rights are. We want the court's decree to establish our rights, and if Chicago treats the Supreme court with the same respect it has treated the secretary of war, we want to go to a tribunal with sufficient authority to require obedience by Chicago with an order."

"The decree should be that these works should be constructed with all convenient dispatch. When these works are completed we want the diversion, including the domestic water supply, stopped. We do not care how much domestic water is used at Chicago, but want it put back."

Attorney Baker made light of Chicago's contention that it would be unreasonable to require that city to extend its water mains as much as twenty miles to obtain pure water. He said that Los Angeles went 235 miles for water; San Francsico, 154 Miles, and New York, 125.

PLAN DRIVE IN SCHOOLS TO CUT LOSSES BY FIRE

Activities of the Chicago fire department will be confined during fire prevention week, Oct. 6 to 12, to mapping out educational fire programs for school children. This year there will be no big fire show like the one held last year in Soldiers' field. Speakers from the fire prevention bureau under the direction of Assistant Fire Marshal Patrick Egan will give the talks in the schools.

Surviving fire fighters who fought the big Chicago fire in 1871 will meet tomorrow afternoon at the Great Northern hotel for their annual meeting and celebration. It is said there are nine of the old fire veterans still alive. Nicholas D. Murray, secretary of the Firemen's Benefit and Mutual Aid society, is aiding the veterans in arranging their meeting.

Coöperation of mayors, fire chiefs, chambers of commerce, schools, and civic organizations in a program of education to reduce fire losses is requested in a proclamation issued by Gov. Emmerson.

"The records for the last year indicate a reduction of approximately $2,208,032 in property destruction in Illinois through fire," said Gov. Emmerson in his proclamation.

"The reduction made last year can be repeated if our people will try to do it. Ninety per cent of our fire losses are due to carelessness and should be avoided."

Gov. Emmerson appealed for increased efforts to conserve resources and cut down the careless waste of wealth by fire in Illinois, which he said takes an annual toll of upwards of $20,000,00 and hundreds of lives.

CHINESE, SOVIETS IN HAND TO HAND BATTLE FOR CITY

Russians Open Furious Drive on Manchouli.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HARBIN, Manchuria, Oct. 3.—What has been described by foreign military observers as the most serious Chinese-Russian military conflict since the beginning of the "war," occurred in the Manchouli sector, beginning Sept. 29, when three soviet airplanes flew over the city and the Chinese positions so low that it was possible to observe the pilots.

On Tuesday, Oct. 1, 400 soviet troops with two field guns approached the Chinese trench north of the city. Twenty minutes of fighting ensued. The Red troops withdrew finally to their original positions. At 5 a. m. on Oct. 2 several hundred Red troops, equipped with artillery, advanced against the Chinese positions on the west side of station 86, a few miles west of Manchouli.

Capture Chinese Trench.

Following a furious artillery barrage, the Red infantry charged and captured one Chinese trench. There then followed several minutes of hand to hand fighting, both sides using bayonets and hand grenades. The Chinese lost three officers and twenty men. The fight lasted for about a half hour, when the Russians abandoned their gains and retreated to their own lines.

At 10:30 the same morning the Red artillery opened fire from their positions northwest of the city, continuing the bombardment for one hour, about 100 shells filled with shrapnel and high explosives fell into the Chinese positions adjacent to the city, but caused no damage inside the town. At 5 p. m. on the same day the soviets renewed their attack on the Chinese positions, while two squadrons of bombing planes, three planes in each squadron, flew over the Chinese lines dropping bombs and raking the trenches with machine gun fire. This action continued till 7 p. m.

The Chinese losses were between thirty and forty killed or wounded. Most of the Chinese wounds were from bayonet stabs received in personal encounters.

Soviet Losses Heavy.

The soviet losses are unknown, but the Chinese claim that they were between 200 and 300. Instructions found in the pockets of some of the soviets who were killed ordered all Russian troops to carry the dead and wounded back to the soviet lines and not to leave any of them on the Chinese side.

There were no casualties among the civilian population, which includes Chinese, Japanese, a few White Russians, and the British customs commission.

Fake Nobleman Buried Alive by French Secret Society

[Copyright, 1929: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Following the discovery, under fantastic circumstances, of the body of a man who had apparently been buried alive in Verneuil woods, only a few miles from Paris, in a rude wooden coffin, to which air was admitted through a specially constructed chimney and tube, the Paris police were today trying to solve a unique murder mystery.

So incredible are the details of the episode that the police, fearing a hoax, did not pronounce the man dead, but tonight turned over the body to consulting surgeons, who will say whether the man is actually dead or is in some cataleptic state. But all of the large number of people who saw the body following its disinterment, feel convinced the man died of starvation.

Well Known to Police.

The man has been identified as Clement Passal, alias the Marquis of Champaubert, one of the most imaginative imposters and fraud artists in the history of French crime. He had a long record, culminating in an attempt to rob a jeweler with the aid of an ingenious chloroforming machine. He had been liberated from prison only two months ago.

His burial place was discovered following the receipt of anonymous letters, which were addressed to the authorities, to newspapers, and to friends of Passal. They were written to give the impression that he had been the victim of a secret society, the "Knights of Themis," organized to inflict punishment on those criminal offenders whom it considered French justice dealt with too leniently. Themis is the Greek name for a goddess personifying abstract right, law, and order.

Passal disappeared some ten days ago, but those who knew him were not alarmed until the anonymous letters about him began to appear, all being signed by the "Knights of Themis." The letters told of the tortures inflicted upon Passal for his crimes. Then it was announced the self-styled marquis had become mentally unbalanced. Finally letters were received giving the exact location of his grave and urging a speedy rescue.

Letter Describes Murder.

The police, apprised of the affair in like manner, considered they were being hoaxed, but early today they made an investigation which corroborated the details given in the letters and resulted in the finding of the tomb and the identification of Passal.

One anonymous letter describing the final moments of Passal said:

"He was in such state of insanity that he showed no emotion, even when told he would be buried alive within a few hours. He was then told that if he made any kind of outcry the tube which admitted air to him would be stopped up."

The message added that the "Knights" abandoned Passal last Saturday night to his fate. The letter coldly stated that he would be beyond aid.

Another letter stated that Passal's effects would be found at the Gare St. Lazare in Paris and to this missive had been pinned checkroom receipts. With them the police obtained a small trunk in which was Passal's clothing, a wallet containing a small sum of money, and other personal articles.

ARREST 4 BOYS FOR ILLINOIS U. ELECTION RAID

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Four University of Illinois students, members of the campus Old Line party, were arrested today and placed under $1,000 each bonds on complaint of John Granata, Chicago, the Independent party leader.

The four students were charged with burglary, it being alleged they raided campaign headquarters of the Independent party and carried off typewriters and campaign literature.

The students arrested were C. F. Edwards, Kansas City Mo., president of Illinois union; W. K. Jordan, Oak Park, Ill.; V. L. Kretschmer, Elgin, Ill., and William Cameron, River Forest, Ill. Friends furnished bond.

PASTOR RESTS IN SUIT AGAINST "MA" KENNEDY

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Counsel for the Rev. H. H. Clark in his $50,000 breach of promise suit against Mrs. Minnie Kennedy rested his case late today. The jury was excused until 9:30 a. m. Monday morning, the intervening time to be occupied by the legal arguments including a motion to dismiss the case. Clark was on the stand today.

Despite his knowledge that Mrs. Kennedy had not given him proof that she had money to build a tabernacle and a gospel ship for him, Clark "believed and trusted her," he testified.

Mrs. Kennedy chided him with being "slow," he said.

His love for her was in a "state of suspense" when Mrs. Kennedy returned to Seattle Feb. 18 in response to his letters, the witness said.

Both Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Seena Lomer, a Seattle woman with whom Clark was supposed to have been friendly, laughed at this.

GOVERNOR CALLS CONGRESSMEN TO PUSH WATERWAY

Urges U.S. Appropriation to Finish the Job.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A call to congressmen from Illinois and other Mississippi valley states to organize for the coming battle for completion of the lake to gulf waterway in the December session of congress was sounded yesterday by Gov. L. L. Emmerson. With President Hoover, as reported from Washington, preparing to ask the lawmakers to help finish the missing link between the great lakes and the Mississippi, the governor takes the ground that middle west congressmen should take time by the forelock and get ready to line up votes against eastern opponents.

"Illinois has never before approached congress with its hand out for funds for the state waterway," said the governor. "Illinois is in a unique position. It has been spending its own money on its waterway project, which is the most vital part of our inland waterways system.

Emmerson Is Confident.

"I believe we are going to get the aid we need. I regard the waterway as one of the most urgent matters pending before the public and I'm sure it will be completed within my present term.

"Back in 1908 the state, by popular vote, provided for $20,000,000 for digging the waterway. Costs have gone up and it will take $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 more to complete the project. The state is going ahead with its construction work. For us to get more state money would require a constitutional amendment, which is a long process, and I cannot conceive that congress is going to deny necessary aid.

"Other states have obtained funds for internal improvements. Look at Boulder dam. Look at the improvements on the Ohio river, the completion of which is to be celebrated this month. It is one of the great inland waterways and on it the government has spent 125 million dollars. Illinois and other central states have paid their share. But the upper Mississippi valley gets no advantage from it because it does not hook up with the great lakes through the Illipois waterway and the Illinois river.

Hoover for Waterways.

"President Hoover, in his addresses, has demonstrated he is an ardent advocate of inland waterways. The Mississippi river with its tributaries constitutes a natural waterway system of more than 15,000 miles. When authorized improvements are completed about 5,000 miles will constitute the trunk lines. They will reach from Pittsburgh to Kansas City and from New Orleans to Chicago and the Twin Cities.

"But without the Illinois waterway this tremendous inland system has no outlet to the great lakes with their great agricultural and industrial development. I cannot conceive that congress will refuse to give the necessary aid for the completion of this 63 mile link that will couple Lake Michigan with the Mississippi system.

How Money Could Be Used.

"As to the bridges, which it has been ruled are part of the Illinois waterway, congress, I understand, has never made appropriations for bridge building. But it would appear easy enough for the necessary amount of aid from the government to be spent on the channel and locks and dams. That's just a matter of bookkeeping.

"Right now, it strikes me, the essential thing is for our congressmen in Illinois and other valley states to get ready for the drive for favorable action from congress."

Gov. Emmerson expects to remain in Chicago until Thursday. Most of his time is to be spent in business of the grand lodge of Masons, and incidentally he plans to see the opening games of the world's series.

MITCHELL APPOINTS LASKEY PROSECUTOR IN M'PHERSON CASE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—John H. Laskey, former United States attorney in the District of Columbia, and a leader of the local bar, has been drafted by Attorney General Mitchell to prosecute Robert A. McPherson, bank clerk accused of garrotting his wife with a pajama cord.

Mr. Mitchell said today that Mr. Laskey will take charge of the case at once and will make his first appearance as a "special assistant attorney general" when young McPherson is arraigned in the criminal branch of the district supreme court tomorrow morning.

The prosecutor is to have the assistance of the best investigators at the disposal of the department of justice. Agents of recognized ability have been summoned from assignments in other sections of the country to unravel the mystery which clouds Mrs. McPherson's death.

Meanwhile, Policeman A. J. Allen, whose persistence brought about a grand jury investigation after a coroner's jury had pronounced Mrs. McPherson's death suicide, and Merritt O. Chance, foreman of the grand jury, flatly refused to attend a hearing of the special board named to investigate police inefficiency in connection with the affair.

CARNEGIE PAPER OPENS OFFENSIVE TO CANCEL DEBTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 4.—William B. Shearer is not the only American propagandist working in Europe.

Today THE TRIBUNE correspondent received by mail a quarterly review published here in French by the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace. It is called the "International Mind."

Besides a long article by its director, Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university, and various other studies regarding international peace, one in particular demands attention. It is by M. S. Sherman of the Hartford [Conn.] Courant.

It is fair to assume that the average European reading a magazine with the Carnegie stamp takes it for granted that it reflects the American viewpoint. Mr. Sherman said:

"The moment is near, indeed, if it has not already come, when we must take serious count of the realities of the situation and ask ourselves if it would not have been better for us, from the double point of view of morals and economics and for the peace of the world, to annul the war debts instead of trying to get them paid by a reparations plan which can never bring us satisfaction of any kind.

"From Germany we ask nothing. But from those whose sacrifices saved the world for democracy we demand the payment of some $21,000,000,000, when the total German reparations probably will not amount to more than $27,000,000,000.

"Some one has calculated that the payment of these $21,000,000,000 by our creditors is equivalent to the work of 470,000 of their compatriots laboring without a break for 65 years. There is nothing in that which will make American hearts bulge with pride."

CAPONE LOSES PHILADELPHIA FREEDOM PLEA

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Al Capone, Chicago's "biggest shot" racketeer, made a loud noise in Municipal court here today, but when the smoke of his third legal battle for release from jail had cleared away, Judge Walsh had again refused a parole. He will remain in jail until May.

His latest bid for freedom was defeated by a technicality. Capone's recent transfer from the county prison at Holmesburg, to which he was sentenced, to the eastern state penitentiary was the stumbling block on his road to liberty. The court, in dismissing the petition for parole, ruled it had no jurisdiction, because Capone no longer is in the county prison. An appeal to the state board of pardons would be necessary to obtain his release, Judge Walsh announced.

DR. MICHELSON IS BETTER, HIS DOCTORS REPORT

A marked improvement in the condition of Prof. Albert A. Michelson, 77 year old physicist, who contracted pneumonia a week ago while recuperating from a double operation in the Presbyterian hospital, was reported yesterday. Following a slight relapse Thursday night, Prof. Michelson rallied and passed a favorable day yesterday, according to his physicians, Dr. Herman L. Kretschmer, Dr. Ernest E. Irons, and Dr. James B. Herrick.

"Prof. Michelson's temperature has returned to an almost normal stage," stated a bulletin released by the physicians last night. "He rested well and took nourishment without difficulty. There is reason to hope for his recovery."

STRICT SECRECY TO VEIL PROGRESS OF WORLD BANK

Parley Opens; Chicagoan Elected Secretary.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BADEN BADEN, Germany, Oct. 4.—The organization committee of the bank for international settlements started work today and its first action was to take steps to insure the greatest secrecy of the proceedings.

WALTER LICHTENSTEIN. [Associated Press Photo.]

A press committee of three members—a Britisher, a Frenchman, and a German — were named. Then every delegate took a solemn pledge not to divulge anything to the press.

The committee today also unanimously elected Walter Lichtenstein of Chicago as general secretary of the conference.

With the American delegation not represented on the press committee, despite the fact that there are more American newspaper correspondents here than of any other nationality, several American journalists petitioned Chairman Jackson Reynolds of New York and also Dr. Hjalmar Schacht of the German government, which is host to the conference since it is being held on German soil, urging that an American member be added to the press committee.

It is understood that certain delegations are in favor of enlarging the press committee, with the possibility that the American delegate, Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National Bank and First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, may be added.

Several delegations today presented draft statutes as a basis of discussion for the constitution of the super-bank.

ALDERMEN VOTE TO PAY LAWYERS' BILL OF $95,903

Payment of $95,903 to the attorneys representing the city in the telephone litigation in the federal court and in the negotiations between the city and the Illinois Bell Telephone company for a new franchise was authorized yesterday by the council committee on gas, oil, and electric light. Ald. John J. Hoellen [47th] alone voted against paying the bill. He said it is a mistake for the city to employ attorneys without first settling on a salary rate.

The bills were for the five months' services of Attorney Benjamin F. Goldstein and the law firm of Haight, Adcock & Banning. The law firm's claim amounted to $64,606 and that of Goldstein to $31,297. Corporation Counsel Ettelson, who employed the attorneys, informed the committee that the bills were reasonable.

Approval of the bills marks the second time that the city recently has gone on record in favor of $20 an hour rate, or $100 for a five hour day, for special assistant corporation counsels. Allan T. Gilbert, engaged in transit matters, receives the same rate.

HANG 2 NEGROES TO SAD THUMPS OF BANJO HYMN

New Orleans, La., Oct. 4.—(AP)—To the solemn thumps of a banjo hymn, two Negroes, Edward McKay and William Virgets, convicted of attacks on white women, were hanged here today in the Orleans parish jail. Each entered the death chamber in a procession led by a Negro banjoist. Next came a Negro minister, the condemned men with guards and another banjoist bringing up the rear.

Georgia Electrocutes White Man.

Milledgeville, Ga., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Alvin E. Merritt, 26 year old husband and father, was electrocuted today for an attack on a young Atlanta matron several months ago, during a series of fiendish acts that caused a near reign of terror among the women in a substantial residential section of the city.

BOOKS

British Critic Writes of New Biographies

Putting "Alice Meynell" at the Head.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—Three biographies of writers are included in the autumn publications, and I have been reading all of them. The first, and in my opinion the best, is Miss Viola Meynell's "Alice Meynell: A Memoir."

ALICE MEYNELL.

This book has an interest for American readers, because Mrs. Meynell had devoted admirers and friends in the United States, and because her daughter's novels, although they never have been very widely read in America, have been admired greatly by all whose taste for these delicate and extremely refined studies in feminine psychology exceeds their love for robuster pieces.

To myself, Miss Meynell's work is always delightful; and her memoir is all that I could have wished. It is like Miss Meynell—lovely, sincere, very quietly humorous, and fastidious without preciosity. She gives us a devoted, but never cloying, picture of her mother, busily engaged in innumerable journalistic enterprises, making and keeping the adoring friendship of such men as George Meredith, Coventry Patmore, and Francis Thompson, writing her poems, writing her very closely packed essays, while the junior members of the family busily edited imitative periodicals under the table.

The junior members, indeed, were severely critical of their mother—in a Pickwickian sense. One of them wrote Mrs. Meynell a warning letter. She said:

Dear Mother: I hope you will in time give up your absurd thoughts about litreture. It makes my mind get quite feverish when I think of the exaltation you're undergoing. I'm getting quite frightened about calling you "Dear Mother," because you will begin to take it quite seriously. Just because Mr. Henley and those sort of unsencere men say you write well simply because they know if they don't flatter they'll never get anything for their paper. Now mother take my advise and don't be quite so estatic, you'll get on just as well in the world and much better because you'll be respected. Now just you see. MONNIE.

This was not the only such letter. Even Miss Meynell, nowadays, can refer to her mother's "terseness and pedantry." I commend this book as a really notable memoir. It can be read upon its own account as well as for its interest as a "life" of Mrs. Meynell.

Another interesting biography is the "Life of George Meredith," by Robert Esmonde Sencourt. The book is not a perfect book, but it has no serious faults. It tells us what we want to know, and is the fruit of much patient and perceptive work. Mr. Sencourt really has added to our knowledge of a great, an interesting, and a mysterious [or mystifying] figure.

The third biography is not called a biography, but a psychological study. It is a book about Charlotte Brontë and her father [as well as other members of the Brontë family], and is the work of Miss Rosamund Langbridge. Miss Langbridge, I believe, is in private life Mrs. J. S. Fletcher, but she also is a novelist whose first book made a distinguished appearance in Mr. Fisher Unwin's "First Novel Library" [by means of which Miss Ethel M. Dell's "Way of an Eagle" won its ways into the hearts of the British public].

Two Prize Contests.

Longmans, Green & Co. are sponsoring two prize contests. One of them is a novel contest, in which the prize will be $10,000 and the judges are Julia Peterkin, Lewis Mumford, and Ernest Boyd, and the other a juvenile contest in which the prize will be $2,000. The judges for the juvenile contest will be announced later.

TEN REAL MURDERS, STILL UNSOLVED, ARE THRILLERS IN BOOK

"Ten Real Murder Mysteries Never Solved," by Sidney Sutherland (Putnam), contains the important evidence in such murders as those of Etwell, Dot King, William Desmond Taylor, Marion Lambert, the Molineux case (about which a large and impressive book has just been published in the American Trials series), the Hall-Mills case, all ten of them really unsolved. The Sutherland stories ran serially in Liberty Magazine and prizes were offered then for the best solutions. In book form they offer fascinating mysteries, in many cases more thrilling than any fictionizer could concoct. Incidentally the Dot King case always has been said to be the basis of the "Canary Murder Case," by S. S. Van Dine.

Meetings and Lectures

"All Quiet on the Western Front" will be reviewed at the Bookfellows' meeting this evening at 6 o'clock at the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street.

Beginning this week, Prof. Percy H. Boynton, department of English, University of Chicago, will give a series of lectures on Tuesdays on "The American Frontier in Literature." This week's lecture is to be "The Historian's Rediscovery of the Frontier." And on Thursdays Prof Walter L. Bullock, department of Romance Languages and Literature, will give a series of lectures on Italian literature. This week's lecture will be on Dante and Beatrice. Both of these series of lectures are sponsored by the University of Chicago and held at the Art institute at 6:45 p. m.

During the next four years—until the World's Fair in Chicago—the University of Chicago has planned a series of lectures on the history of Chicago. On Friday evenings at Fullerton hall beginning this week, "Topic from the History of Chicago," will be discussed. Wilton M. Krogman of the department of anthropology will talk on "Chicago's Indian Trails and Villages."

At a luncheon given by the American Library association on Friday at the Union League club, brief talks will be given by David Lawrence, president of the U. S. Daily and the Consolidated Press association, on "Time Out for Reading," Carl Milam, secretary of the American Library association, on "The Reason for a Library Association," and Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, the new president of the University of Chicago, on "University and Library." The purpose of the meeting—according to the announcement is "to provide an opportunity for Chicago men interested in Chicago's educational progress to learn more about one of the major educational activities centered in this city and its contemplated program for extension."

Maurice Browne, co-author of "Wings Over Europe," and producer of "Journey's End," will be the guest of honor at supper on Sunday evening, Oct. 13 at the Gordon, and at a tea on Monday, Oct. 14, at 3:30, at the Arts club given by the English Speaking union, he and the members of the companies of the two plays will be honored. Mr. Browne was the director of the first Little theater in America, the Chicago Little theater.

"RED NAPOLEON," OUT AS BOOK, PACKS A WALLOP FOR READERS

"The Red Napoleon," by Floyd Gibbons [Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith] is a sort of "Looking Forward." In it Mr. Gibbons, who has won international fame as a war and foreign correspondent for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, draws a picture of the next war, a world wide conquest by a Red Napoleon, who believes that the supremacy of the white race must be ended: that all races should be put into the melting pot so that only one human race should emerge.

This newer Napoleon conquers Europe and invades America to kill white men and capture white women. It is a thriller of the first water describing in detail a terrific and horrible war all over the country. "The Red Napoleon" ran as a serial in Liberty magazine.

Maurois Tells of Jealousy, Love's Poison

First Stimulating Then Killing Affections.

"Atmosphere of Love," by André Maurois. (Appleton.)

André Maurois, author of "Ariel," which, if any book ever was, is a distillation of the "atmosphere" of genius, has done in his latest book the extremely difficult task of distilling the atmosphere of love.

Love is able to thrive, to exist, even, only in a certain delicately intense atmosphere. Each temperament demands variations of the general ether of love, but there are certain types of love which demand always the same atmosphere about them. The possessive type is the one which M. Maurois has chosen to depict, and the atmosphere in which it must, despite itself, live. "Atmosphere of Love" or "Climat," as it was called in French, is the very straightforward record of two people, a man and a woman, who loved passionately and devotedly, and whose love was fed rather than destroyed by jealousy, although jealousy was a torture and a horror to both of them.

The man is the husband of the woman. He writes her, on their wedding day, the story of his previous love life, the flaming heart of which was his adoration and his persecution through jealousy of his young wife who left him for another man and killed herself soon afterward. The woman writes, after her husband's death, as sincerely honest a record as she can of her love for her husband, which was of the same jealous nature as his for his first wife. Together they make a study of too-possessive love so subtle, so intense, so real that the reader feels that same sense of involuntary intimacy that one feels sometimes in walking down a hospital corridor on to which doors are opened and through which terror or travail or the coma of utter exhaustion cry out at him.

The reader knows, terribly, the travail of the soul that has gone on in the man and the woman, and he knows it, not because it is described in detail, but because what the author does describe is so poignant a picture—like those involuntary glimpses along a hospital corridor—that its very sketchiness says more than many completely detailed pictures could say.

In such an atmosphere can love blossom. In such another it must fade and die. And, paradoxically, what nourishes love—for the man, and as well for the woman, although she does not make it so plain—is the very thing that destroys it, suspicion, gnawing jealousy, the alternate warmth of certainty and the iciness of uncertainty. That is the subtle and extremely difficult subject which M. Maurois chooses and which he elaborates with the same skill with which he did the atmosphere of genius in "Ariel."

Dr. Joseph Collins has done the translation, which seems to me to be exactly the kind that the author of "A Doctor Looks At," etc., would do. He almost succeeds in making the book clinical. It is a very bad translation, but even harsh transliterations cannot entirely ruin the delicacy of M. Maurois' moods.

The book is not a factual thing. It deals entirely with the emanations of facts, not facts themselves. The situations, most of them, are typically French. In such marriages in America the disturbing factors would be different. The reactions of those who love, however, are not racial, but universal.

SUBTLE AUTHOR

This caricature of André Maurois was made by Eva Herrmann in Paris especially for The Chicago Tribune. Miss Herrmann, the leading literary caricaturist of America, is in Europe making sketches for a book which will be a companion to her "On Parade," which was published in April of this year. M. Maurois' latest novel, "Atmosphere of Love," is reviewed today by Miss Butcher.

Josephine Herbst Deftly Mixes Cash, Love, Youth, Ambition

"Money for Love," by Josephine Herbst. [Coward-McCann.]

Josephine Herbst is a young American novelist—this is her second book—who has a real quality in her work. She writes like a feminized Ernest Hemingway. She uses no adjectives.

Descriptions are done with the quickest strokes possible. She observes and records. She does not suffer with her characters in either happiness or unhappiness. She has a cold eye turned upon them. Her material, in "Money for Love" is the sort that made Vina Delmar famous, the relationship between men and women not given to articulate expression of their emotions. There are five characters in "Money for Love," the heroine, who wanted to be an actress, but left New York just as her career seemed to be starting, because she loved a man who loved his wife. After her return, four years later, she met another man whom she loved so much that at the beginning of the book she is trying to blackmail the first man for $5,000 so that she can go to Vienna with the man she loves and help him to study medicine.

The hero, a weak sort of youth, is torn between his affection—he won't call it love—for the heroine and his fear of hurting the feelings of his dead wife's sister, who lives with the heroine. The dead wife's sister disapproves of the relationship, and is on the edge of being in love with her brother-in-law's best friend. He works in a research laboratory. There is an Aunt Rachel, who irritates the four young things when they want to be alone, but provides the final escape for the hero and heroine.

All Quiet Returns.

The latest bulletins on "All Quiet on the Western Front" are startling. There have to date been sold in Germany 852,000 copies, in France 300,000 and the same number in England, and in America the 260,000 mark was reached on Thursday. That makes a grand total of 1,712,000 copies sold within less than a year of its original publication—a record, unless we are mistaken, of the world.

Britain Is Child of 'Queen Bess,' Woman Writes

Katharine Anthony Tells of Famous Reign.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Queen Elizabeth," by Katharine Anthony. [Knopf.]

Katharine Anthony wrote, a few years ago [in 1925, to be exact], a life of Catherine the Great which was one of the most delightful biographies of many a year. She has, during the years since then, been working on the life of another spectacular feminine figure of royalty, Queen Elizabeth.

KATHARINE ANTHONY.

With Catherine the Great biographer had memoirs to work into which the caloric queen poured her passions and her acts almost in the manner of a modern flapper. With Queen Elizabeth she had only letters directly from the royal hand and a mass of legend, rumor, false record and gossip that must have been staggering.

Miss Anthony used the same method of research in both cases. Although the results in the case of Elizabeth are not so bizarre as they were with Catherine, the biography which eventuated is the same sort of intimate document that its predecessor was.

Miss Anthony is the typical modern biographer in the sense that she never hesitates before opening a door marked "private," nor is deterred from describing the contents of the room into which the door opens. But she is not given, as some modern biographers are, to offering only the contents of such rooms and neglecting the reception rooms and the drawing rooms and dining halls. Unlike some modern biographers, she knows very well that although a third of the lives of public human beings is lived in private, a good deal of that time necessarily must be spent in sleep, and what happens during the other sixteen hours has of necessity a good deal of weight in any life history. Her heroines are public characters, and she treats them as such. Their relations with their public are, in fact, their lives. Of Elizabeth she says, as a last word, "Her reign was a marriage, and the nation was her child." The intimate relations between Elizabeth, Queen of England, and her spouse are material for Miss Anthony's pen. Her personal relations with individuals, with Sir Thomas Seymour, with the Earl of Leicester, with Jean de Simier and his master, the Duke of Alençon, with Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex [about which Lytton Strachey wrote last year with such convincing interest] were reflected in her relations with her subjects, but at no time in her life did her love for a favorite interfere with or even touch her love for her country.

Those personal relations form, of course, a large part of the book, for they have been the subject of more speculation than any relations in history. "The Virgin Queen" was not a soubriquet alone of respect. It was used as well in derision. Infinite variations of the stories of Elizabeth's love affairs have come down in records and rumors. While Miss Anthony had with Catherine perfectly outspoken and undeniable facts on which to build the structure of that queen's love life, with Elizabeth she had only masses of contradictory material. Out of it all she has drawn a picture of a woman constitutionally averse to marriage but eager for dalliance and demanding adoration, but a woman, also, who curses like a man, horseplays like a man, even spits like a man. The struggle within herself was a titanic one. "Elizabeth not only often thought and spoke of herself as a man, but not rarely acted as if she were really one," Miss Anthony says. "Her obvious masculinity strove steadily with the feminine part of her disposition, and the two tendencies were so well matched that they seemed to neutralize each other." Miss Anthony goes on to say, "It was in her character as queen, as administrator, that Elizabeth realized her great creativeness."

The great test of any biography which hopes for popularity [as opposed to those which are merely thorough scholarly records of minute facts—like the Moneypenny Buckle life of Disraeli, for instance] is whether it has such allure in its writing and such skill in its construction that it keeps the reader, if not at white heat about its hero or heroine and what is going to happen to him or her, at least warmly interested in what is awaiting him on the next page.

"Queen Elizabeth" has that "It" of biography. It is a mistake to say that a biography is "as thrilling as a novel," for no novel on earth can equal a really skillful biography for fascination. "There, but for the grace of God, go I" gives a zest and a tang to biographies which even the most beautifully created novels lack. They have a human reality, are an intellectual fly paper that tangles your spirit. Some one once made the sage remark that some day people would say of novels, "As fascinating as a biography." "Queen Elizabeth," while not one of the great biographies of the world, has that quality, that "It," to a degree. You start it—and you have finished it before the tension loosens. "Queen Elizabeth" is the October choice of the Literary Guild.

PRIZE AUTHOR

English Archer Makes Voyage with Magellan

That's Enough to Stir Youthful Minds.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

Charles Joseph Finger is not a new name on that ever growing list of authors of adult books who are also doing fine things for boys and girls. The announcement that he is again a prize winner in the juvenile field causes little surprise to those who are familiar with his work. His fine edition "Heroes from Hakluyt" of last year and the beautifully written "Tales from Silver Lands" which won for him the Newberry medal in 1925 were worthy predecessors of the book which has carried off the $2,000 prize in the recent Longman's juvenile story contest.

It is called "Courageous Companions" and is the story of a young English lad who sailed with Magellan on the first trip around the world, a story of daring and adventure, of human nature at its best and at its worst, which no boy of spirit can read without feeling something of the thrill of strange sights and strange peoples which held young Dick Osberne with the fleet despite everything.

From the first chapter in which we are introduced to him as one of the winners of the markmanship contests on the Devonshire village green to the last one wherein, the voyage over, he sets sail for the open sea and home, one lives with him on shipboard and on land. He returns, not a boy but a man, one who has seen the dross in the characters of the great, and has learned much of intrigue and jealousy in high places. He has lived through a great adventure and has remembered well Sir Robert's charge to the young archers on the village green, "wherever ye go, wherever ye be, be courageous companions always."

There is humor in the book, delightful humor which calls forth many a wholehearted laugh. It is throughout a superb story, finely told, and the boy of high school age who has been used to good reading will appreciate it at once. It is a title to be noted by those who would give to the older boy a book which he will want to keep always.

Among the books for younger children [9-11 years old] there are three which seem especially worth noting in their particular fields. They are Rhea Wells' "Coco the Goat" [Doubleday-Doran], and Ethel C. Phillips' "Lively Adventures of Johnny Ping Wing" [Houghton Mifflin]. They are two delightful stories. The former is a lively tale of a goat belonging to a little Spanish boy and the good times they had together. The latter is another of the popular toy stories which children like so much. Johnny Ping Wing was only a little Chinaman, made of peanuts, but he brought great delight to little Jim on his sick bed, and marvelous were the times they had.

Ethel Phillips has given us many lovely stories for little children, but in this one has written one which I think they will like best of all. On the fairy folk tale list there is "There Were Giants" [Dodd-Mead], by Kathleen Adams and Francis Atchison. This is a compilation of many famous giant stories and is an excellent book for use in telling of reading stories to children who like to hear of giants and their doings and who are not frightened by them.

For children or parents who are fond of marionette entertainments there is an excellent book by Edith Flack Ackley called "Marionettes" [Stokes]. It gives very definite details for the making of marionettes, using materials that generally are easily obtainable. Directions for staging popular marionette plays are given and original entertainments suggested. All are kept very simple, making this book very useful for the home, school, or church which may be interested in supplying this wholesome and well liked type of amusement for the children. Directions are so specific and simple [with patterns included in pocket of the book] that children themselves may make use of them in preparing little plays.

MORE STORIES FROM THE WAREHOUSE OF "TRADER HORN"

"The Waters of Africa," by Alfred Aloysius Horn and Ethelreda Lewis (Simon & Schuster), is the third volume of Trader Horn's literary excursions. In this one he is again in Africa. It was written a year before his first volume was published and while he still was Africa minded, as the advertising people would say.

Trader Horn's visit to America did one thing for the legend of Zambesi Jack—it made Ethelreda's contribution to the Trader Horn volumes assume their rightful place, for any one as garrulous and as accomplished a liar as old Trader Horn proved himself in every conversation could never have whittled out of his brain anything as coherent as "Trader Horn." Mrs. Lewis was a well known novelist before the publication of "Trader Horn." She seems now to be a creator of a legend as well as a creator of plots. Incidentally, "The Trader Horn" balloon is as flat as a mud puddle and just as likely to rise aloft again.

Yankee Woman Tells of Early Steamboats in China

"Pidgin Cargo," by Alice Tisdale Hobart [Century], is a novel whose background is the interior of China, and whose time is that of the coming of steam navigation to the upper reaches of the Yangtse river and the opposition encountered by an American river captain from the native junkmen, the Chinese officials and from the river itself.

Mrs. Hobart gathered her material during the fifteen years she spent in the interior of China. Her husband, an American, was tied there by his business, which took them far from the usual tourist routes into some of the most isolated and remote corners of the country.

"Pidgin Cargo" has no literal translation—its nearest meaning is contraband or smuggled cargo. One of the most common items of pidgin cargo is opium.

Harry Leon Wilson Writes New Comedy of American Manners

"Lone Tree," by Harry Leon Wilson. [Cosmopolitan.]

Any consideration of humor in America must give Harry Leon Wilson one of the most gaudily gold embroidered sets of caps and bells. He is one of the best humorists American literature has produced and a few of his books, like "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "Merton of the Movies," for stance, are the keenest and most brilliant satire. His latest book, "Lone Tree," is, like "Merton," a satire on a state of affairs peculiarly American. It is about a grand old cow man and his family.

HARRY LEON WILSON.

Oil spurted on their land, and what it did to the family and the solid old cow man makes an amusing tale. The family went hay wire, dashed to Europe to pick up culchah and an assortment of antiques, and came home to reform the movies by investing in a great cultural film. The old cow man had a ruptured appendix, a grand time in the hospital, and took home as his contribution to the new status of the family a college professor who needed a rest, an aviator who had a tongue in his head and in his cheek, and a couple of nurses, one to worry his wife and the other to be a mother to an orphan whom he managed to steal from the hospital.

There is a lot of splashy sentimentality about the old cow man and his lone tree which he planted when it, or he, I can't remember, was a baby, and which is symbolic to him of the new life which he is planting on the range—by taking the baby away from a foundling's life. But mostly there isn't such sentimentality to cloud the fun.

A lot of incongruous and impossible things happen, but they make a funny story. And there are times when Mr. Wilson is as skilled at digging the reader in the ribs as he ever was. It's a funny thing about writers like Harry Leon Wilson. No matter how inconsequential the thing that they do, if they have an innate skill and a certain technique, the result is amusing and interesting. Sometimes that very skill and technique used so casually, as it is, for instance in "Lone Tree" make you a little sad. You would prefer that an author either did something better or less well something which seems not quite worth his doing.

THE LEGION ASKS ABOUT PACIFISM.

At the national convention of the American Legion resolutions were passed asking the senate to investigate lobbying opposed to national defense. The Legion suggested for inquiry the National Council for the Prevention of War, Federal Council of Churches of Christ, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, American Civil Liberties union, League for Industrial Democracy, National Students' forum, War Registers' league, Young Workers' league, the Young Pioneers, and the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism.

The general secretary of one of these organizations, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, has telegraphed the Legion that the council invites investigation and makes the proposal that the Legion conduct the inquiry itself. We doubt if the senate would surrender its prerogative in this matter, but we hope it will reconsider its former decision to let pacifist lobbying alone. An inquiry into the latter would at least have the justification of immediate relevance which the exposure of Shearer has thus far failed to develop. It has been shown that Shearer, whatever his former commission, is now out, and the senate committee thus far seems not to have discovered that he has for the present conference any successor. If Mr. Schwab et al. are, by deputy at least, lurking behind the arras when Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald confer, the senate will expose them, now that it is on guard.

But we think the American Legion is expressing the desire of most Americans and certainly of all men who have tasted the bitter fruit of war experience when it demands that the organized opposition to national defense be given senatorial attention. The American public has a right to know what this opposition really represents, how it works and whom, just as it has a right to know all about Shearer and his employers.

We have had a plague of legislation imposed upon us by organized claques and minorities, and even on so vital a national concern as defense we have found both the legislative and executive branches at times subjected to pressure which did not express the judgment or will of the main mass of the American people. It was minority opinion which urged departure from a policy of independence as old as the republic and our commitment to European politics. The people overwhelmingly supported refusal. It is minority opinion that is always demanding concessions and sacrifices of American interests in the name of some theory of world betterment or some asserted moral responsibility. The people, whenever they have had a chance, have repudiated these notions of duty or policy, but the propaganda goes on and is capable of serious mischief in the long run. Politics is timid and is more likely to be impressed by a vociferous group in the foreground, making larger claims of support than it can prove, than by the silent dissent of the average American, preoccupied with his private cares and concerns and having no disposition to rearrange the affairs of the universe. From this situation arises the danger of frittering away the nation's interests and opportunities.

The phenomenon of a persistent organized opposition to adequate defenses for this country is as worthy of thorough examination as anything in our public life.

FAITH, HOPE AND PARITY.

For our readers' consideration in the discussion of Anglo-American naval agreement we republish as Editorial of the Day sane comment upon auxiliary cruisers from the New York Sun. It discusses the bearing of merchant shipping of the superior class upon the question of naval parity. THE TRIBUNE has repeatedly pointed out that any consideration of parity which ignores the factor of fast merchant ships must be delusive, and we are glad to have the Sun insisting upon this phase in a community particularly susceptible to foreign influences and disposed to adopt a foreign point of view.

RAILROADS AND THE EASTERN STANDARD.

The president of the Reading railroad has announced that the electrification of the company's New York division is projected. The railroad is now spending twenty million dollars to electrify its property in the Philadelphia area. Other railroads in the east have undertaken ambitious improvement programs and the eastern terminals of the western railroads are models of modern transportation facilities. The eastern standard demands electrification and the railroads are conforming to it.

Chicago, we believe, should accept no less from the railroads than New York and the east. To suffer, without protest, the noise and dirt of steam transportation in our residential and loop neighborhoods is to confess an inferiority to the east which does not exist. The railroads produce distinctions to justify slighting Chicago in the allocation of investments. Special conditions obtaining in the east make electrification desirable and profitable, while the absence of those conditions here makes electrification in Chicago inadvisable. The residents of Chicago will not much longer be deceived by these arguments. Railroad capital has not been invested in the improvement of the Chicago terminals because the ownership and management of the carriers is predominantly eastern. The natural interest of the directorates may impel them to cultivate only their eastern properties, but the productivity of the Chicago terminal justifies investments here for the physical development of the city.

FREEDOM FOR CONGRESSIONAL BOOTLEGGERS.

New regulations issued by Assistant Secretary Seymour Lowman of the treasury department provide that congressmen returning from official trips shall have the freedom of the port and if returning from nonofficial visits shall have the courtesy of the port. The one gives them entry without examination of their baggage. The other will expedite the examination and may make it next to no examination at all.

The effect of this immunity granted members of congress is to nullify the Volstead act for them so far as import of liquors is concerned. They are granted first class bootlegging privileges by the department of the government which has the enforcement of prohibition. There is nothing in the habits or acts of most of the dry voting congressmen to justify any confidence that they will respect the privilege granted them. If their baggage happens to leak it will be the liquor of a brother-in-law. If they have freedom of the port and immunity from any examination their belongings will be heavy with liquor every time they come back from a free country to the one from which they have legislated the theory of adult self-control and self-respect. Even if they are to expect only the courtesy of the port they will take a chance that it will be recognized as distinctly discourteous to find a dry congressman legging in contraband beverages.

The experience with the Chicago representative, the Hon. M. A. Michaelson of leaking baggage, and with the Hon. W. L. Morgan of the great dry state of Ohio, was typical of what may be expected when congressmen get where they can procure a liquor supply.

This granting of indulgences to sin against the laws which intolerance demands has great antiquity, but it never has gained respectability. The immunity from interference with a dry congressman's personal habits makes it all the more pleasant for him to interfere with the freedom of other people. He can acquire merit and get his liquor. He can live in the odor of sanctity and the smell of the barroom at the same time with the benediction of the cloth and the tipstaff upon him. The constable will wink at him and the cleric will support him. He can fit the halo to the hangover.

BIGGER AND BETTER TAXES.

A lawyer for the school board is protesting against the tax reassessment on the ground that it is too low. He gets his appointment from the school trustees, who, in turn, get theirs from the mayor. Therefore, when he demands an increase in taxes it is the mayor of Chicago who is, in reality, responsible. Property owners may bear this in mind when next the mayor or his henchmen appeal for votes with a pledge to lower taxes.

A COURT FOR THE BUILDING TRADES.

Labor leaders seem to have realized that the costly disputes among building trades aggravate the depression of the industry. The problem is intralabor, and fortunately labor shows a disposition to solve it. One of the most promising reforms was the method discussed at the Toronto meeting of the Building Trades council of the American Federation of Labor—the creation of a mediation court to adjudicate internal disputes.

The probability that jealousy between plasterers, and carpenters, an impasse of plumbers and electricians, a quarrel between structural iron workers and bricklayers will upset the plans of the builders is a deterrent to the investment of capital in construction. There is no grievance against the builder in these disputes. Concessions from him will not start the interrupted work on his project. The workers impose an impediment on the building industry, the prosperity of which is an index to their welfare. Labor will be serving its best interests in providing a means for the economical settlement of issues between the building trades.

Editorial of the Day

OUR AUXILIARY CRUISERS.

[New York Sun.]

In any forthcoming discussion between Great Britain and the United States of limitation of naval armament the question of armed merchant vessels is bound to enter as a complicating factor. There is particular pertinence, therefore, in the figures which the Army and Navy Journal publishes in its current issue with the introductory remark:

> Should actual parity between two powers be achieved in armed fighting ships, then the balance of power would lie largely in the merchant marine which could be converted into fighting ships in an emergency.

There is no absolute agreement among experts as to the lowest limit of tonnage available and useful in time of war. The British Tenth cruiser squadron, which patrolled the North sea during the war, included one armed merchantman of 2,000 tons but of 17 knot speed. General naval opinion places the minimum useful tonnage between 4,000 and 8,000 tons.

The Journal's figures, compiled from Brassey's Naval and Shipping Annual for 1929, show that on a 4,000 ton basis Great Britain and the dominions have 2,357 vessels and the United States 1,380. On an 8,000 ton basis Great Britain has 424 and the United States 143. On a 10,000 ton basis Great Britain has 225 and the United States 50. These comparisons have to be considered in relation to the aggregate number of steamships and motorships in the United States and in Great Britain and the dominions. These figures are: For Great Britain and the dominions, 72,840; for the United States, 3,005. About one in six of the British ships and about one in seven of those owned in the dominions are less than five years old, in contrast to one in every twenty-five American ships.

Merchant vessels can be converted into 6 inch gun cruisers without delay in event of an emergency. It is obvious, therefore, that no agreement concerning cruisers can ignore the naval reserve that actually exists in the merchant marine of the two nations. There are not enough American ships now to carry American goods; it naturally follows that in the event of war this lack of merchant ships would be even more keenly felt; essential commerce or the auxiliary service of the navy would have to suffer for it, one or the other.

ARTHRITIS OF THE SPINE.

M. C. C. writes: Please write an article on arthritis of the spine.

REPLY: Arthritis means inflammation of a joint — any joint. The spine is a series of joints. There are twenty-six or more bones in the spinal column, the exact number depending on how you count, and between each two of these bones there is a joint. Of course, this is only a part of the story. The skull bones, the ribs, and the pelvic bones form joints with the spine bones. And to make matters worse, in addition to the joints between the bodies of the vertebrae, there are points of bony contact between other parts of the vertebrae. If any joint is liable to develop arthritis, what other part of the body equals the spine in possibilities?

In a loose way we call arthritis rheumatism. For one form of arthritis rheumatism is the proper word. There are other forms for which some other term should be used.

The symptoms of arthritis of the spine depend on the kind of arthritis and its location. When a man is subject to repeated attacks of a pain in the back which he calls lumbago, the chance is that he has arthritis of the spine. Of course there is a form of rheumatism of the muscles of the back which should be called lumbago. But when a man has chronic lumbago or attacks which come with great frequency he had better have an X-ray of his backbone, for he probably has arthritis.

A large part of the group of troubles which goes by the name sciatica is really arthritis of the spine or the joint between the spine and the pelvic bones or somewhere nearby.

Again, a large part of the group of disorders called "lame back caused by the job" are cases of arthritis of the spine.

In some instances the trouble is not in the spinal column itself but is in some ligament close to it. X-ray pictures made of men with persisting lame backs not infrequently will show lime deposits in these nearby tendons and ligaments. Much of the deformity of the back bone is due to the same cause. It causes bent necks which will not straighten, curved backs, bad shoulder humps, spinal curvatures, locked spine and other disorders of that general kind.

What's to be done about it? That depends. First comes an effort to get the trouble diagnosed and located. That generally means X-rays. Then the treatment will have to be worked out. It may be anti-rheumatic baths. It may mean massage. It may mean casts. Unfortunately, many, if not most, of the cases cannot be cured.

YEAST AS A FOOD.

J. J. writes:

1. What is your opinion of the value of yeast and yeast tablets in a general rundown condition and as a help in gaining weight and strength?
2. I would also like your opinion as to whether milk loses its food value if it is heated or boiled.
3. Are foods made from milk in which the milk must be cooked valueless?
4. Is an egg more easily digested raw, soft boiled, or poached; or is it just as good scrambled or fried?
5. Do you think toast is constipating?

REPLY.

1. Yeast is a valuable food in the conditions you mention.
2. It does not.
3. No.
4. Practically no difference.
5. No.

MAY NOT BE SHINGLES.

W. G. M. writes: What can I do for shingles? Great welts come out on my shoulders, itching and stinging, accompanied by something like neuritis.

REPLY.

Your description fits urticaria or nettlerash. It does not fit shingles, which is herpes.

Urticaria or nettlerash is generally due to something in the diet, though there may be another cause. To prevent it, find the cause and avoid it.

To obtain relief, bathe the skin in some soothing water such as water to which has been added either soda, witch hasel, ammonia or grain alcohol.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MUST MAKE SAFE OR WRECK.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—[Friend of the People.]—Complaint has been made to the building department of the dangerous condition of property in the 2100 block of North Kimball avenue. Action was promised but nothing has been done. Since that time the building has fallen into such condition that a strong wind would blow it down. G. G.

Owner has been notified to put building in good and safe condition or wreck same within ten days.

CHRISTIAN P. PASCHEN,
Commissioner of Buildings.

MOTOR LAW RESTATED.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In a recent issue of your paper you made the statement that, in regard to age of drivers, the state law of fifteen supersedes the city law of eighteen. I saved the piece, but lost it recently. Today I had need for it. I was stopped and questioned, and when I verbally quoted your statement I was told that it was in error. I am only 16 but I have been driving for four years on and off and quite steadily this last year. Besides, I am going to college, and I think my judgment as good as the next person's. G. O.

Section 31 of the motor vehicle law is as follows: "No person shall operate or drive a motor vehicle who is under fifteen years of age, unless such person is accompanied by a duly licensed chauffeur or the owner of the motor vehicle being operated." This state law supersedes city ordinances on the same subject matter.

FOOTBALL FORECAST.

SEVERAL Big Ten football elevens entertain ambitious opponents for so early in the season in their encounters this afternoon. Purdue and Indiana look to have the hardest tasks. In fact, if Notre Dame has the strength generally attributed to it, Rockne's Hoosiers will take the Hoosiers of Pat Page in the homecoming ceremonies at Bloomington.

Wisconsin's reputed dash and power should receive a good test from Colgate, while Northwestern's revamped line may have a busy afternoon with Butler, especially with Cavosie of the visitors in an attacking rôle. Kansas will give a good workout, or more than that, to Zuppke's champion Illini. Forecast:

IN AVIATION LANGUAGE.

HTW: The other day Clem McGuire dropped into Elsa's little Main street café and ordered an oyster stew. When the steaming soup was served Clem explored it cautiously and found one lone, single, solitary oyster. Holding it aloft on his fork he cried out loudly and with much éclat: "Oh, lookee, as I live and breathe. A stowaway!"

PUMPKIN PIE TIME.

When the maples turn golden and the white oak's leaves grow brown,
And the sumach forms a scarlet sash to bind the thicket's gown,
When the sere grass gleams and sparkles with the frost and the blackbirds fly
In an ever growing conclave, it's the time for pumpkin pie.

Merit well the reputation of the canny honeybees,
To usurp their right and title to the rustling fields of maze.

There is an exhilaration in the nipping autumn air
With its wondrous store of magic which we are free to share,
That accents the joy of living and is timed exactly right
For its appreciation—and a healthy appetite.

My nostrils sense a fragrance no perfumer can impart
To his répertoire of sweetness through his skill and subtle art,
So I contemplate goodness of sunshine, earth and sky
In a composite masterpiece—delicious pumpkin pie.

The players were in crap shooting formation. A water boy scuttled out with a dripping pail of water and a sponge. One man picked up the sponge, sucked it, dipped it into the water again, and swabbed the back of his neck. The next player duplicated the performance—a most unsanitary proceeding. But, dog-gone-it, it was so hemannish it served to intimidate the opposing mollycoddles who merely gulped their water from milk bottles, gurgled, and spat it out again.

BARGAIN PRICE WITHIN REACH OF EVERYBODY

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 5, 1864.

CINCINNATI, O.—Maj. Gen. Joseph Hooker assumed command of the northern department, including the states of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and will have his headquarters here.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.—Our loss in the battle of last Friday was greater than at first stated. It will reach in killed, wounded and captured about 2,000, over half of whom were captured. Today the rebels fell back to their main line of works. Their position is a very strong one and cannot easily be taken. A division of the 2d corps advanced toward the Boynton road, over which the enemy take their supplies by wagon to Petersburg. Near the road a formidable line of works was found and it was not deemed advisable to attack. In the last battle a shell grazed Gen. Meade's boot, took a piece from the tail of Gen. Humphrey's horse and entered the ground between Gens. Bartlett and Griffin.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—The rebel force reported at Spring Hill yesterday was commanded by Gen. Forrest in person, and numbered 6,000. It moved toward Columbia, destroying the railroad as it went. The rebels in front of Huntsville are commanded by Gen. Roddy and are reported to be quite formidable in force. A dispatch from Franklin says heavy firing has been heard for several hours in the direction of Columbia.

CHICAGO.—William A. Gooding has been appointed superintendent of the Illinois and Michigan canal in place of John B. Preston, who resigned.

CHICAGO.—Dr. John Macalister and Miss Abbie Morrison, daughter of E. Morrison, were married on Oct. 4 at the home of the bride's father by the Rev. Dr. W. W. Patton.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 5, 1899.

CHICAGO.—The formal opening of the fall festival was signaled at sundown by the unfurling of banners, the flinging out of flags, and the flashing of thousands of lights in the State street court of honor. Street cars were not allowed in the street, and the entire space from wall to wall was given over to pedestrians. Charles A. Stevens, chairman of the committee on decorations, said: "No community has ever witnessed a grander spectacle."

WASHINGTON.—President McKinley ordered the armored cruiser Brooklyn and the gunboats Machias and Marietta to the Philippines to maintain an effective blockade to cut off supplies to the Filipinos. This action is the result of a conference Admiral Dewey had with the President.

LONDON.—A dispatch from Newcastle, Natal, says: "The Boers have left the laager at Volkarust and are moving toward the frontier. The situation is most critical. All women and children have been ordered to leave for the interior of Natal."

CHICAGO.—Bicycle lamps must be lighted at 5:34 p. m.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 5, 1919.

WASHINGTON.—Dr. Cary T. Grayson issued this bulletin: "President Wilson has passed a more encouraging day. The improvement is slight but not decisive." Despite this bulletin the alarm of official Washington is increasing over the prospect that the President's incapacity will be protracted. Secretary of State Lansing has called a cabinet meeting for tomorrow, presumably to devise means for continuing the routine of executive business. Not only routine business but foreign affairs of the utmost moment are dangling at loose ends.

CHICAGO. — Eleven companies of Indiana state troops are being rushed to the Gary and Indiana Harbor steel strike zone by Gov. James P. Goodrich. They were ordered out last night after Gary had been swept for two hours by rioting strikers. Scores were arrested and the hospitals were filled with wounded following a pitched battle between 5,000 strikers and several hundred policemen and special deputy sheriffs. Not a shot was fired. Paving stones, bottles, bricks and clubs were the weapons used.

CHICAGO.—The world's series score now stands three games for the Cincinnati Reds to one for the White Sox. The Reds won yesterday, 3 to 0.

THE ROOT FORMULA.

WHITE DEER, Que., Sept. 28.—What is a formula, so called in the language of diplomacy? Is it a writing purposely confused with the design of passing it for something which it is not? Was the Root formula designed to be passed upon the country as an acceptance of the senate's reservation which none but a captious member of that body could question?

That the attempt is now so to pass it, by the industry of the foundations and the strong arm of the administration, there is no gainsaying. Neither sticks at trifles. The American foundation informs all who will take its word for it that the formula accepts all the reservations "exactly as they were formulated by the senate" and that "so long as the United States is a member of the court no advisory opinion can be given over one objection," while the administration announces that it is only waiting to tell the senate to its face that its objections have been met.

The senate stipulated that the court shall not "without the consent of the United States entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest."

In response to this the surprising formula volunteers in one part the sweeping proposal that "the court shall not without the consent of the United States of America render an advisory opinion touching any dispute to which the United States is a party" or "touching any dispute to which the United States is not a party, but in which it claims an interest, or touching any question other than a dispute in which the United States claims an interest." To the ordinary man this, however astonishing, can only mean that without our consent the court shall not render any advisory opinion at all.

Yet it is the selfsame extraordinary instrument that in another part goes on to provide that if, after objection by the United States and an exchange of views, the request for an opinion is still insisted upon and the United States will not "forego its objection, in that particular instance leaving the request to be acted upon by the court without in any way binding the United States," then the United States may withdraw. Nothing is clear about this except that the court may render the opinion not only without the consent but against the matured objection of the United States.

This cloudy, self-contradictory paper, not disowned by Mr. Root, would, in the opinion of Mr. Stimson as he makes bold to state, "meet the objections raised by the senate." When a lawyer turns diplomat clarity gives place to obfuscation and what opinions lose in sanity is made up in assurance. Will the senate join the make-believe or confess that it has changed its mind, if it has?

JOHN W. FARQUAR.

A SAFE DRIVER IS A DEAD DRIVER.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—"A man at the time he causes an accident is not happily thinking of himself emotionally. A man who is comfortable in mind and body and at ease with himself, adjusted to his work, to his environment, and to his home life, whose work record is good, thus showing he is neither sick, perplexed, nor fatigued and also showing he is not misplaced, inadequate nor discontented—such a man is not likely to cause accidents." (From THE TRIBUNE quotation from Dr. Hulbert's speech before the general session of the annual safety congress at the Stevens hotel).

I don't know whether the quotation is correct or not, but if it is, it is time that some checks be administered to these experts on life and accidents. The man described by the good doctor could not cause accidents because he is dead.

But suppose we assume that the above quoted statement was made seriously. Just what can be made out of, "happily thinking of himself emotionally"? How does one think happily and emotionally of one's self while driving a car, for example? According to Dewey, thinking is a cerebral process resulting from a felt difficulty. Then a man who is described as at ease, adjusted, uncomplexed, contented, etc., could not think of himself because he would have himself no difficulties. In fact, such a man could only bovinely enjoy his state of Nirvana. In that state any sort of activity would be impossible. Words, idle words!

The social implications of the well adjusted as used by idealistic social workers and would-be scientists are interesting. An adjusted person is presumably one to whom the exigencies of existence present no difficulties. A social order containing adjusted citizens would be static, integrated, and, that we say, happy. The nearest approach to such an order may be found among the ants and the bees, where adjustment has extended to biological structure and instinctive activity. Among men a social order of that sort could result only from complete atrophy of rational functions, for the function of rationality is to detect and to solve the problems presented by stimuli to the organism. Since individualism is chiefly rational, to secure an integrated social order could result only from the negation of individualism. In such a scheme the human organism is improperly regarded as a cell is a super-organism. Society then is God and man is vile.

THE HAWK

By ROY VICKERS

SYNOPSIS.

Douglas Dorling, a young British peer, is sent to Dartmoor prison on the perjured testimony of Cora Sefton, an unscrupulous woman in love with him. In revenge, because he snubbed her advances, she swears she saw him kill a policeman in a night club raid.

Dorling is a famous aviator, but to keep this knowledge from his mother and spare her worry, he has been using the assumed name of Douglas Harris; and as Douglas Harris he is tried and convicted.

He is rescued from prison in spectacular fashion, right under the eyes of his guard, by persons unknown; is shaved, dressed in new clothes, and driven to the Gunter hotel, where, to his amazement, he is greeted by Cora. She has registered as his wife.

Cecily Warren, the girl Douglas loves, is also staying at the Gunter. She sees Dorling embraced by Cora on his arrival and jumps to the conclusion he must be secretly married. Disillusioned and heartbroken, she leaves for London.

Douglas meets his father's old friend, Sir Aylmer Granston, in the lobby, and accepts his invitation to drive to London. He escapes from Cora, leaving a note. Immediately she wires Jabez Malleron, well known amateur connoisseur of the arts and a neighbor of the Granstons. As Malleron is decoding the wire, Marthe Perralle, Cecily's maid, calls. She is obviously in his employ. He directs her to bring her mistress within a few days to a town called Mortvaig, in Scotland.

That night, while Dorling is dining with the Granstons, Malleron calls. Later Cecily comes in, not knowing Doug is there. She greets him frigidly, and creates a sensation by announcing she hears he is married.

Doug goes to see Cora, and asks her to explain all the mystery. She refuses, but tells him he is to go to Mortvaig, Scotland, to meet her chief. He agrees, but first visits his mother at Dorling Towers. Cecily's father, Charles Warren, who lives on the fringe of the Dorling estate, calls, and remarks casually that his daughter has taken a job furnishing a Mortvaig millionaire's house. Doug is struck by the coincidence in names. Can it, by any chance, be the same man who is Cora's chief?

At Mortvaig Doug can only learn that, in return for his freedom, he is being blackmailed into a mysterious service as an airplane pilot. He takes off for his first trip, with drugged Cecily is on board, drugged.

Charles Warren, who is in the government secret service, though this is not known to his friends, takes a holiday at home. Detective-Inspector Rason of Scotland Yard calls for a conference. He believes Harris' escape from prison was a carefully planned one, and links it with a gang of smugglers whom he and Warren are pursuing. He has learned that the van in which Doug was rescued to a London furniture company. Warren knows this same company sent Cecily to Scotland. Rason suspects trouble, and wires the Mortvaig police.

Landing at his island base, Doug is shown about by another pilot, Lieut. Beresford. On his return to Mortvaig he is permitted to go down to London for a few days and he decides to shake himself free of the gang. He calls on Cecily to explain everything to her but is told by Mr. Warren that Cecily has disappeared from Mortvaig. Her maid returned without her and could shed no light on the disappearance. When Douglas sees Cecily's maid he remembers that he had seen her at the Mortvaig airdrome and suspects she is one of the gang. With a shock he realises that he must have carried Cecily to the island and that she is being kept a prisoner there by the chief. He decides to return there at once, but does not tell Mr. Warren of his suspicions.

Arrived at the island he asks to see Miss Warren and greatly to his surprise he is allowed to see her. He arranges for her escape and manages to land her in England. He is pursued by a navy plane, however. He flies inland, then heading the plane again toward the sea he drops in a parachute. His plane is shot down in flames and Douglas Harris is presumed to be dead. He hurries to London expecting to see Cecily, but is amazed to learn that in some way his plans miscarried and that she has again been captured by the gang. Hoping to obtain news of Cecily, Dorling meets Cora at a night club. He is drugged and wakes up on a boat at sea. Cecily, is also on board. There is something peculiar about the boat and its passengers.

INSTALLMENT XXXVI.

A WAITING GAME.

Dorling conceded to the captain that his purser and chief steward might be telling the truth.

"The gang who drugged my whisky were quite capable of the rest."

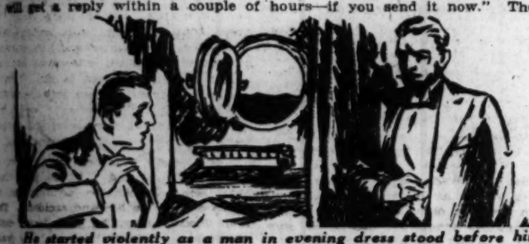
"A gang, eh!" echoed the captain, with a short laugh. "Why should a gang want to put you on this ship—a fortnight's pleasure cruise and back to Southampton. If you think it over, it doesn't seem reasonable."

"Anyhow, the thing is soon settled," he snapped. "Send a wireless to my club or better still to Scotland Yard. They will know of my disappearance by now."

"That's a fine idea!" said the captain enthusiastically. "By jove, Dorling, that will settle the whole thing, of course! I'll have the wireless sent off and we'll talk it over again after breakfast, shall we?"

The enthusiasm puzzled Dorling. To use the wireless was, after all, a very obvious course of action.

"Thanks, but I'm not particularly keen on waiting until tomorrow. You will get a reply within a couple of hours—if you send it now." The last words were spoken with special meaning. "And then," he added, "I'm afraid I shall have to ask you to make for the nearest port."



He started violently as a man in evening dress stood before him.

"Make for the—ho! ho!—" The captain cut off his laughter. "Of course, my dear fellow! That—that's what I would have suggested myself."

"It's pretty obvious you don't intend to send the wireless, Captain Marwood. You don't want to prove that I'm telling the truth," he almost taunted. He made for the door. "Very well, I shall tell the truth myself."

"I can't allow you to excite the other passengers," said the captain.

Dorling paid no heed. He banged out of the cabin feeling, as he did so, that it was unwise to run away from the captain.

He descended from the bridge deck and had not gone a dozen steps before the chief steward accosted him.

"Captain Marwood's compliments, m'lord, and would you please go to your cabin?"

From nowhere, as it seemed, four muscular stewards had appeared. There was no doubt whatever that they had been sent to enforce the orders the captain had given by telephone.

With a shrug of the shoulders he made his way to his cabin.

As he shut the door behind him it was locked from the outside.

He sat bolt upright on the edge of his bed trying to guess what they would do with him.

"They can't murder me. Too many people know I'm here. And they can't keep me here forever. A fortnight's pleasure cruise, he said."

He started violently as a man in evening dress stood before him. He had not heard the door being unlocked.

"How d'ye do, Lord Dorling! My name's Steevens. I'm the doctor, you know. The captain said you were feeling a bit dickey. Shall I run the rule over you?"

"No thanks. Nothing whatever the matter with me. I've simply been shoved in here against my will. I asked the captain to wireless my friends and he has locked me up here."

"Him! Sandbagged by a gang of crooks and all that?" asked the doctor.

"D'you mind going?" said Dorling curtly.

"Nothing much the matter with you!" chirped the doctor. "This kidnaping business is one of the earliest symptoms. I'll send you up a little bromide to help you to sleep and you'll have forgotten it tomorrow."

"What about that locked door?" demanded Dorling.

"We'll see about that tomorrow. If you feel fit there'll be no need."

"In that case," said Dorling to himself, "I shall feel fit tomorrow. Then I'll apologize to Captain Marwood. It looks as if this is going to be a waiting game."

On the next morning breakfast was brought to Dorling in his cabin and shortly afterwards the doctor appeared.

Overnight he had not taken the medicine sent to him.

"Hullo, doc!" he said cheerfully. "Pretty good stuff of yours—I slept like a top."

"Glad to hear it. Let's have a look at you." At the end, Dorling asked: "What was I driveling about last night?"

"The usual stuff," was the indifferent answer. "You told the captain you'd been kidnaped."

"Phew! I'd better go and apologize."

"No need. He's used to that kind of thing. It—it often happens on this damned ship."

There was a wealth of feeling in the last words that startled Dorling.

"You don't seem to like the life, doc."

The other laughed with concentrated bitterness.

"D'you think I'd be on the job if—if I were allowed to do anything else?" he said as if he were speaking to himself.

The two men faced each other—between them a secret that Dorling could not then try to fathom. He felt that in other circumstances he and the young doctor would have liked each other.

"No harm in my getting up, is there?"

"No. You're all right. I'll report to the captain. But, look here, mind you don't let me down. If you feel gloomy, come and see me and I'll give you some more bromide. You see, if one patient starts all the others may tune up, too."

"The others!" echoed Dorling. "Are the whole lot of 'em patients?"

"More or less, of course!" said the doctor and then, as if fearing he had said too much, he left the cabin abruptly.

The door was unlocked from the outside before Dorling had finished dressing. As soon as he could he hurried to the deck and a few minutes later he had found Cecily.

"Now—what does it all mean?" he asked as they stood together by the rail, a dozen yards from a noisy game of quoits. "Why do we have to pretend—"

"We have to pretend we're enjoying it, you and I—or they simply think you're mad and lock you up," she said.

"That's what happened to me last night," he broke in and told her all that had happened since he had flown with her to Redcorn and seen her leave the airplane in a motor boat.

"And now," he finished. "I want your yarn. I know the gang held me up and took you away."

"Then you know nearly all there is to know. I haven't the least idea how I got on board. I simply woke up in my cabin."

"Didn't you do anything?"

"Of course! Send for the stewardess. Then they brought the doctor. I told him as much as was necessary—how they had brought me down from the north in a saloon car—that they must have given me something in the night. He simply thought I was raving and sent me a bromide. I soon found that the only thing to do was to agree that I had been raving—just as you did."

Good Morning!

What would you do if you woke up in the morning and saw five stars above a review in this column? [Always supposing, of course, that your first conscious act is to grab for THE TRIBUNE and turn to the movie department.] I ask the question not because there ever WILL be five stars but because I'm curious to know and because I feel like giving five to "The Lady Lies."

It's such a "different" picture, so rich with human understanding, so replete with deep and quiet humor! It deals so honestly and, yes, gayly, with the sort of situation we speak of as "impossible." It is sophisticated. It is tender. It is uncompromisingly if whimsically analytical. It is great because anybody can understand it and because it succeeds in being interesting to everybody.

The lady who lies is a woman who loves a widower who loves her but who is supposed to marry another whose blue blood and Puritan principles will provide suitable background and surroundings for his son aged fifteen or so, and his daughter who is about—thirteen, I should say.

Mr. Rossiter [the widower] has brought this charming and precocious pair up, to face things with him and say what they think on all subjects to him. Convinced by the arguments of bigoted relatives that their adored father is in the clutch of a scarlet woman [yes, they know what that means, too, for believe them they have read!] they take the situation in hand with what results you shall discover when you see the picture.

The film is presented with a wealth of subtle and fascinating incidents. None of the acting could be better than it is. Walter Huston gives a brilliant and sympathetic interpretation of Rossiter, Claudet Colbert is completely winning as Joyce Romer and the two youngsters as represented by Patricia Deering and Tom Brown are an original, intriguing and intensely appealing pair. Patricia reminds you so much of Lois Moran!

"The Lady Lies" is an all talker boasting dialogue and synchronization which are all that the heart could desire.

I don't want to tell you what to do BUT if I were you, I'd go see "The Lady Lies!"

Yes, sir, another four star movie! [A feast or a famine, isn't it, fans!]

Here we have Messrs. Ben Hecht and Lionel Barrymore working wonders together in their respective capacities of author and director, assisted by one of the best casts ever assembled for one altalker.

Mr. Hecht has done a Van Dyne—meaning, he has written an unguessable mystery story. A dozen times you think you've spotted the master criminal. A dozen times you are wrong. If you can detect the guilty party you're a better sleuth than I am, for my smug deductions landed me—completely up in the air.

You see, don't you, that the story of this piece must not be told you here? The only information I hand you is, that in a London fog occur a series of stranglings that lead Scotland Yard officials—and various other persons—into the home of Lord Montagu where . . . well—the "unholy night" is the night spent in that weird mansion. What happens, I guarantee, will make your blood run cold. [There are several scenes that are almost too gruesome, but these, I imagine, will be out of the film by the time you view it.]

You will be delighted with all of the acting, and most particularly with that of Roland Young. The rôle he plays admirably suits his engaging personality and Mr. Barrymore has drawn him out with sympathy and understanding. Dorothy Sebastian, beautiful as a dream, captures your imagination. The activities of Ernest Torrence, Sojin, and all others concerned keep your eyes popping and your interest at white heat.

"The Unholy Night" proceeds fast and fascinatingly to a smashing climax, dealing out laughs and gooseflesh as it moves on its mysterious way. You'll agree with me, I'm sure, in thinking it one of the best "whodunit" films ever produced.

See you tomorrow.

MICHIGAN'S CHOICE

ALEXANDER G. RUTHVEN.

Iowan Chosen by Regents After Long Dispute.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Dr. Alexander Graham Ruthven, the man who has been doing the work of a president without recognition since last May, today became president of the University of Michigan by a unanimous vote of the board of regents, succeeding Dr. Clarence Cook Little.

Shortly after 5 o'clock Dr. Robbins, assistant to the president, emerged with the announcement, "It's all over, boys, it's Ruthven!"—and thus was ended the long wrangle the regents have engaged in since Dr. Clarence Cook Little tendered his resignation last Jan. 1.

Early in the summer news leaked out that all but two regents, Junius Beal of Ann Arbor and Benjamin Hanchett of Grand Rapids, were in favor of Dr. Ruthven, then dean of administration. No sign of a break in the wrangle appeared until ten days ago when Dr. Ruthven became acting president by a resolution of the regents delegating the powers of the president to the dean of administration. Even this was taken in most quarters as a temporary arrangement which might last indefinitely. Negotiations with President Chase of North Carolina university were rumored.

Mrs. Leroy Cram of Flint, first woman to become a regent, was sworn in this afternoon to succeed Hanchett, who resigned because of poor health, and her vote was for the new president.

The new president is 47 years old. He was born at Hull, Ia., and did his undergraduate work at Morningside college, gaining his A. B. degree there in 1903. He received his Ph.D degree from the University of Michigan in 1906 and immediately began his duties an instructor in zoölogy and curator of the museum of zoölogy. In 1919 he became a professor and also director of the museum.

On Sept. 7, 1907, Dr. Ruthven married Florence Hagie of Ann Arbor. They have three children, Katherine Lenora, Alexander Peter, and Bryant Walter Ruthven. The former was graduated from the university last June and Peter is a junior now.

Dr. Ruthven has conducted expeditions for the museum in various parts of the new world and the results of his research are given in 124 books, pamphlets, and magazine articles.

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Stella Armstrong, R. R. No. 2, Roscoe, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Have you ever ridden in a horse drawn vehicle?

The Answers.

John O'Laughlin, 516 Wrigley building, clerk—I have, and I quite liked the sensation. When I was out in Iowa five years ago I had a buggy ride from the farm to town, a round trip of about fourteen miles. It took a lot of time, for a horse even at a trot doesn't go much faster than one can walk, but it was interesting.

Miss Vera Pafford, 1209 Sherwin avenue, artist—O yes, when I was a small child I spent one summer on a farm and they had wagons and buggies drawn by horses, and I thought it was so much fun. They also had an automobile, but it was the horses that interested me then.

John A. Johnson, 5110 North Ashland avenue, clerk — Let me see now, not that I remember at the moment. I have been in Chicago all my life and I don't believe I ever had that opportunity. I have done horse back riding, but not in a buggy or wagon. Strange to say, I have often wondered how people ever managed to travel in such style.

Mrs. Katherine Trumbo, 1759 North Lincoln street, housewife—I have ridden in horse drawn vehicles all right, plenty of them. I have relatives on a farm in Iowa, so I have had plenty of opportunities to ride in all kinds of conveyances. For a real thrill the horse and buggy is there, because so uncommon now.

Charles E. Mills, Oak Forest, Ill., advertising — Yes I have. I got a bigger thrill about five years ago out of driving a filled hayrack than I have got out of driving a modern high speed car at 85 miles an hour. That load of hay seemed to place me fifteen feet from the ground, and it was an unusual experience for me.

Muzio Returns with Husband for Season of Civic Grand Opera

If the arias of Claudia Muzio, prima donna of the Chicago Civic opera for seven seasons, seem richer and sweeter than even before when she sings next month in the new home of the opera, her inspiration may be traced to an enraptured young Italian below the footlights. He is Renato Liberti, Fascist journalist, and since this August her husband.

Mme. Muzio came back to Chicago yesterday after a year's absence from the company, elated to be in Chicago again, eager to join the old opera crowd in the new opera building, and extremely proud of her young husband with whom she eloped. The couple have established themselves in the bungalow atop the Hotel Morrison. There they will live in their "honeymoon nest," as Mme. Muzio calls it, during the thirteen week season.

"Me, my mother, the maid, the dog—every one eloped." That was the opera star's description of her marriage to Liberti, who is, by the way, her first and only husband. The other "elopers" are sharing the home on the Morrison's roof.

"We met and it was love at first sight. We eloped away from every one else, but the family whom we took along, about 2 o'clock one morning. We went to the smallest watering place we could find to be married. People found out about it, but we traveled in motor cars and kept fifteen days ahead."

The opera star fell into a discussion of the especial merits of a career with marriage, while her husband talked of the most important of subjects—his wife.

"When Mussolini wished farewell to Mme. Muzio," he related, "he wished her especially good luck, because he said she was an ambassador from Italy to another country. He told her that a country is known to another country through its great artists rather than by diplomats.

"Mussolini came to the opera only three times last year in Rome; those were the times when Mme. Muzio sang. Once this year she sang 'Norma,' a special performance for il duce."

Liberati, a leading journalist of Italy, is a nephew of Franco Liberati, director of the government department of dramatic art. While in America he will write articles for the Fascisti on the theater in this country.

U. of Chicago Students Study Stage Craft, Costumes, and Makeup

"Bachelor of make-up", or "Doctor of costume-construction" may be the academic degrees conferred upon future graduates of the University of Chicago's new department, announced yesterday. It is described as backstage craftmanship, the practical lore or costume colstruction, and is now a part of the regular curriculum. The Midway institution is claimed to boast the first university laboratory and workshop in the country for such a purpose.

Mrs. Minna Schmidt, internationally known for her historic figurines, has been appointed lecturer in the department of historic and stage costuming. She will teach two classes a week. Miss Cicely Foster, her protégé and a graduate of the university, will teach a course on a survey of historic costumes.

Under the direction of Mrs. Schmidt, a laboratory has been equipped with all the facilities for the making of actual costumes of various periods. Economy of time and of material will be taught, and business methods will include the punching of a timeclock on the garment work of the students. Plays in the various periods studied will be produced on a miniature stage.

Edith Mason Will Sing at Benefit for Hospital

Miss Edith Mason, Chicago Civic opera star, will sing for the benefit of the Highland Park hospital on Monday evening, Oct. 14. The concert will be held at the Deerfield-Shields High school, Highland Park. The entire proceeds will go to the hospital. Tickets are on sale at the hospital, telephone Highland Park 2550. Mrs. Sellar Bullard is president of the hospital's board of managers.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

Mrs. C. R. Overy, 102 South Park road, La Grange, says she is not the sister of Mrs. Dolly Moore, 30 years old, of La Grange, killed in an automobile accident Sept. 29, as reported in THE TRIBUNE of Sept. 30.

An item yesterday stated Harry Wilk of 5503 Congress street had rewarded Fannie Friedman with a $5 note because she found "$35,000 in jewelry and $500 in cash" in a second hand parlor suite sold by Mr. Wilk and returned it to him. Mr. Wilk said last night that what Miss Friedman found was $45 in money and one $350 diamond ring.

Guns of British Guard Jews in Holiday Rites

Wailing Wall Scene of Military Display.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 4. — [Jewish Telegraphic Agency.]—Eight hours before Jews held services this evening at the western wall of the temple, commonly known as the wailing wall, ushering in the Jewish New Year, 5690, the British authorities took extraordinary precautions to prevent any recurrence of the recent disturbances.

It was disorders on Aug. 5 in the precincts of the wailing wall which led to the Arab attacks and bloodshed.

At 10 a. m. today a formidable military force moved into the bazaar to reinforce the police squads on guard there. Infantry, machine gun units, bombing squads and airplanes were sent to the scene, where the Moslems were about to gather for their sabbath prayers in the mosque of Omar, and the Jews, later in the afternoon, for their rosh hashanah prayers in front of the wailing wall.

Moving from three sides, the military forces took up their position at the citadel of David. Steel helmeted soldiers lined the streets and the dark alleyways leading to the wailing wall. New armored cars recently brought from Egypt occupied strategic positions at the main gates of the old city.

Regulations for the holding of Jewish services at the wailing wall were issued by the military authorities this morning. They stipulated that all appurtenances brought by the worshippers to the wall must be in accordance with dimensions fixed by the government and that no outside objects are to be introduced.

The recently opened door to the right of the wall, leading to the mosque of Omar area, is to remain closed during the Jewish holidays. All traffic past the wall is to be suspended.

The marching in of the troops, bringing with them field kitchens and munition caissons, brought out the crowds which lined the sidewalks along Jaffa road leading to the old city. Airplanes roared overhead.

Chicago Jews Participate.

As dusk fell last night, 300,000 members of the Jewish race began the rites of Rosh Hashonah. They turned to self-examination and preparation for renewed responsibilities of life.

Perhaps the largest gathering among the temples and synagogues was that at the Medinah temple, Cass and Ohio streets. There thousands gathered. A thousand seats were reserved for strangers in the city. These services were under the suspices of Temple Sholom, headed by Rabbi Abram Hirshberg.

Dr. Felix A. Levy spoke at the services of the Emanuel congregation in the Uptown temple, 941 Lawrence avenue, on "The Binding and the Bound." High holiday services will be celebrated in both auditoriums of the South Shore temple, where G. George Fox is the rabbi. On Sunday morning special services for children will be held. The residents of the Hyde Park district will attend services at the temple at 5035 Greenwood avenue, conducted by Dr. Gersch Levi, rabbi of the temple.

SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS

Soon Men Won't Have a Vice of Their Own Left

BY DORIS BLAKE.

THESE WIMMIN are getting so that men won't have any vices of their own left. Smoking, cocktailing, cussing, stock speculating—and here's James reporting on his wife's poker nights!

A terrible poker gambler the woman has become. Just a year at it and now an incorrigible addict, eating up the husband's savings, running away from home to wherever a poker game in which a woman may participate is going on.

The bridge fiend in woman form has been raising ructions in perfectly good homes for some time past. It's no secret among certain cliques that many a good, hard working man of the house has this trial to bear—and the losses, too. And the ruses to which women resort to cover up their bridge losses would make a story by itself, one of not too pleasant reading, either.

But the poker addict somehow is not without its humorous touch. All of the Saturday nights of jackpots and antes and alibis come home to roost with women taking to the chips.

James' plight, however, does deserve a more sympathetic hearing, in view of the fact that things have come to such a pass that the home was broken up once and now is on the verge of a second disintegration.

"She begged me to forgive her that other time," James tells, "and I did. But three weeks afterward she was off playing poker again and losing. She was all right until she started playing a year ago. She has cost me everything I saved and I won't stand for any more of it."

I hope for James' sake that women respond to the poker cure more readily than men have done in the past. The truth is that I don't know what the cure is, if there is one. Maybe a good scare of withdrawing complete support might bring the woman back to her fireside duties. If that won't do, perhaps she had better be hauled off to court and put on probation for a term.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—The British ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard gave a dinner tonight to meet the premier of England and his daughter, Miss Isabel MacDonald, which included the members of the staff of the embassy and a few personal friends of the hosts and the house guests.

The secretary of war and Mrs. James W. Good were the guests of honor at the opening yesterday of the military exposition and carnival at the Army War college held the last three days of the week. Mrs. Stimson, wife of the secretary of state, also was in the party, and they were entertained in the tent of the chief of staff, Gen. C. P. Summerall. The affair is being given for the benefit of the army relief society. Sergt. Alvin C. York, an outstanding hero of the late war, is here as the special guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Mellon of New York and Pittsburgh and their daughter, Miss Jane C. Mellon, are spending the latter part of the week here.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Admit You Were Wrong.

"Dear Miss Blake: The girl I love and I quarreled. It was my fault, due to jealousy. What can I do? JACK."

Admit you were at fault, Jack. She'll admire your frankness and give you another chance.

By His Attentions.

"Dear Miss Blake: How can I find out if the fellow I love loves me?

"KIDDO."

Principally by the attentions he shows you and his efforts to please. When in love a young man is very anxious to do the right and nice thing at all times.

Paris Sends Us Bucolic Theme in a Smart Guise

BY JEANETTE EATON.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Many a sophisticated townswoman protests that she'd like to live in a village. Now a Paris couturier, Normal Nartnell by name, is going to call her bluff. He has designed a composite ensemble called "My Village" which offers suitable habitation for the modish madame. It even provides for moving day. This feat of dressmaking skill is sketched at the top of the page.

Putty colored tweed collared in beige fox fashions the coat. A side closing provides for a front panel of tucking and tucking decorates the lower part of the coat all around. It is slightly fitted, flared and finished with an even hemline. The first small sketch shows a matching tweed skirt topped by an overblouse of tunic length developed in putty colored satin, printed with an all over design representing village scenes. Side pleats at the bottom contrast with horizontal tucking, at the top of which is placed a belt indicating the natural waistline. If the tweed skirt is removed there appears a skirt of matching satin.

What a bonanza for changeable climate like ours! You can start out dressed for winter in the morning and finish the day equipped for a southern temperature. And, by the way, I have already seen on view one costume destined for southern wear. It sponsored a jacquard weave of spun silk in gray-green tones for the cleverly executed frock. This was made with the front panel and bottom in one. Fitted side sections finish the bodice and circular flares are inset in the skirt. Worn with it is a belted coat in soft novelty wool with flared scarf collar. Oracles of fashion predict an ever increasing interest in spun silk as a medium for both blouses and one piece dresses.

300 Children Plan to Sing at Stock's Silver Anniversary

Some 300 children of the parochial schools of Chicago will take part in Frederick Stock's silver anniversary as conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Dec. 20 and 21. By arrangement between Mr. Stock and the Rev. Daniel F. Cunningham, superintendent of the school board of the archdiocese of Chicago, a children's chorus of this size will sing at Orchestra hall when Mr. Stock conducts Gabriel Pierne's "Children at Bethlehem." It will be a new work in the orchestra's repertoire.

The training of the chorus will be done in the various schools under the direction of Sister Mary Antonine and the Rev. Edwin Hoover, director of music at the Quigley Preparatory seminary. After the music is learned, the units of the chorus will be brought together for rehearsal with Mr. Stock at Orchestra hall. The schools taking part are St. Barnabas, Visitation, St. Brendan, St. Philip Neri, St. Laurence, St. Rita, Trinity High school, and the Quigley Preparatory seminary.

A new symphony has been composed by Miss Marjorie Eastwood Dudley of 525 Greenwood boulevard, Evanston, for several years professor of musical theory and history at the University of South Dakota. The first movement has been played by the Chicago Civic orchestra, and as soon as the entire work can be tried out by this orchestra for revision purposes it is planned to give it public performance. Prof. Dudley is the composer of a string quartet and several songs and piano numbers. E. M.

Expects Boy Singer to Be Feature of Paulist Choir Fete

When the famous Paulist Choristers of Chicago appear in concert Oct. 10 at the Chicago stadium, John Rogers, 12 years old, will have a chance for national distinction as a singer.

That is what Father O'Malley, choir director, predicts. A year ago, when John joined the choir, his voice seemed like that of other boys. But when the director gave him lessons he discovered unusual ability. Father O'Malley described the boy's voice as phenomenal and thinks he will prove to be the star of the entertainment.

M. Dupre, concert organist, will arrive next week to inspect the organ recently installed in the stadium. He is the organist of Notre Dame cathedral and is internationally known. Tickets for the joint concert are on sale.

Trick Lighting to Aid Hospital Fashion Show

BY THALIA ——.

The setting for the third annual fashion show to be given by the women's board of St. Luke's hospital on Oct. 22 at the Stevens hotel is to be something quite startling and effective, according to Mrs. Walter Wolf's report made yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Henry Faurot Jr. and Mrs. Charles Glore at the Casino.

Mrs. Howard Linn is seeing to the plans for the setting, which is to be the last word in modern art, severe and plain, like the new façades that have been put on all the famous dressmaking establishments in Paris. A trick lighting device, first used by the Moscow Art theater and designed to give either an outdoor or indoor background by a turn of the switch, will illuminate the scene as the picked mannequins parade the new fashions. Mrs. George A. Ranney is in charge of the models and is inviting them to meet for tea at her residence next Monday.

The board is delighted that Ned Wayburn is coming to drill the mannequins in the proper stride and pivoutting gait to display the clothes, and more than $12,000 worth of advertising has already been sold.

Present at the lunch yesterday were Mrs. Lewis L. McArthur, Mrs. Selim McArthur, Mrs. Sterling Morton, who is a new board member; Mrs. Charles Pierce, Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson, Mrs. Augustus Eddy, Mrs. Russell Kelley, Mrs. John W. Gary, and Mrs. Edwin Ashcraft.

Mrs. Barbara Granger Cowles wore beige velvet, a matching hat, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and lilies of the valley for her wedding yesterday noon to Chester De Witt Shepard. The service was read in the chapel of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest, with only the families of the bride and groom and a few friends present.

Mrs. William Mitchell Blair, who was her sister's only attendant, wore wine colored velvet and carried Talisman roses. A wedding breakfast at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Granger, followed the service. Donald Shepard was best man for his brother. Mrs. Cowles' little girls, Sally and Mary Hoyt, had little bouquets to hold as they stood beside their mother during the ceremony, and afterward at the wedding breakfast there was a special table for them, their cousins, the Blair boys, and for Kathleen and Betty Lord, the daughters of Mrs. Russell Lord.

The tables for the breakfast were decorated with arrangements of autumnal fruits.

The Chicago committee of Arden Shore will hold its first meeting on Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Illinois Women's Athletic club. Mrs. Herbert S. Nock, Chicago chairman, has already issued invitations for the annual ball to be given for the benefit of Arden Shore camp on the night before Thanksgiving, Nov. 27, at the Palmer house. Miss Barbara King is in charge of the box sale and will have as assistants Miss Betty Dixon, Miss Barbara Poole, Miss Marianne Stevenson, Miss Jean MacLeish, Miss Louise Badgerow, and Miss Jean Stevens.

The Cliff Dwellers are to give a dinner on Tuesday evening for the staff and company of the Goodman theater on the occasion of the opening that evening of their new season beginning with "Romeo and Juliet." Among those who have made reservations for the opening performance are the William O. Goodmans, Percy Eckhart, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr., Charles H. Swift, Arthur Bissell, John W. Root, Lorado Taft, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Worcester.

The board of directors of the Woman's National Republican club has issued invitations for a luncheon on Thursday next at 12:30 o'clock at the Chicago Woman's club for Mrs. Jacob Baur, president of the club. Mrs. Baur is to discuss her impressions of Europe, gleaned on her recent trip as delegate to the convention of the International Chamber of Commerce held at Amsterdam this summer.

The English Speaking Union has cards out for a tea for Maurice Browne, co-author of "Wings Over Europe" and producer of "Journey's End," and members of the Chicago companies of those two plays on Monday, Oct. 14, at 3:30 o'clock at the Arts club.

Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Herbst, who are on their way to India to visit the Maharajah of Mysore, his son, the Uvaraj, and the Gaekwar of Baroda, entertained in New York City at the Savoy-Plaza to welcome the Maharajah of Kapurthala, who landed in the United States this week.

The Herbsts, with Mrs. Herbst's son, Richard Rosenwald, her daughters, Miss Elinor Rosenwald and Mrs. Aida at the annual meeting yesterday and the other officers are Miss Roberta Harvey and Miss Jeanette Peterkin, vice presidents; Miss Eileen McGuire, recording secretary; Miss Virginia Dixon, corresponding secretary, and Miss Margaret Sinclair, treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Francis Burch Jr. are to give a tea tomorrow for Miss Rosma Burnett Hengen, whose engagement to Mrs. Burch's brother, Victor Hugo Schulze, was announced recently, and for Mr. Schulze. The party will be the first to be held in the Burches' new residence. Miss Hengen and Mr. Schulze are to be married on Armistice day, Nov. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wilson Renshaw of 1320 North State street and their son, Frederick, have returned from a two months' trip through the Canadian Rockies and California.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Gartz Jr. of 232 East Walton place and Miss Gail Gartz were to sail at midnight last night of the S. S. American Legion for Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

Thirty Nuns Take Final Vows to Shun the World

MILAN, Italy, Oct. 4.—An incident recalling the religious enthusiasm of the middle ages afforded a sharp contrast with its modern surroundings yesterday when thirty nuns voluntarily submitted to the strictest form of lifelong seclusion at Rondo della Cagnola, once Lombardy's industrial center. Cardinal Schuster, archbishop of Milan, performed the ceremony. The cardinal and the clergy of Milan walked up the aisle of the monastery chapel between a double line of chanting monks holding lighted tapers.

Cardinal Schuster celebrated high mass. Then he addressed the nuns kneeling around him, telling them that their giving up beauty, riches, friends, and even the liberty of talking to each other is a great investment for future heavenly happiness.

The nuns then received communion from the cardinal while repressed sobs from different parts of the chapel indicated the presence of the nuns' relatives.

Following the celebration of mass the cardinal and the monks put on snow white hoods and proceeded to the convent, followed by a large crowd anxious to see the sacred premises for the last time. The cardinal gave his final blessing to the nuns. The convent doors slowly closed.

Here Are Chances to See Sir Joshua's, Raeburn's Paintings

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Possibly the most impressive exhibition in the galleries today is that of eighteenth century English portraits at the Anderson galleries. A magnificent piece of portraiture and of painting is the canvas depicting John Hunter, painted by Sir Henry Raeburn. Another striking portrait is that of Dr. Charles Burney by Sir Joshua Reynolds.

The art of painting never was more in its flower than in England in the eighteenth century. The painting of children and of women never was, before or since, more of a delight and art. Reynolds, Romney, Gainsborough — those three names flourished then. The work those men did is as alive and vital today as it was when first completed.

In the current show there is "A Young English Prince" by Gainsborough and "Miss Reade" by Sir William Beechey. Beechey was another portrait painter of extreme finesse. John Opie's "Self Portrait" is an interesting canvas. "Penelope Cotes" by Sir Francis Cotes is charming, and the portrait of the countess of Pomfret by Reynolds is brilliant.

There are some twenty paintings in the exhibition. One or two landscapes break the ring of portraits, but for the most part this is a distinct collection of portraits and as such has added weight from the circumstances of the sitters and the fineness of the painting. After looking at them long it becomes a puzzle how much of the modern portraiture has the standing it has. A "modern" portrait is nowhere beside one of these finished, exquisite, and sturdy paintings.

The exhibition will continue into the month.

Gwen Lee, Charles Kelly, Both in Movies, to Marry

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Gwen Lee, blonde film actress, and Charles Kelly, musician, who recently acted as a theater master of ceremonies around Chicago, are engaged to be married. Miss Lee announced the engagement today. They met when Miss Lee began her picture career in Hollywood six years ago, and recently they played together in a film called "Lord Byron of Broadway."

Changing Styles Offer Longer Skirts, Lines Still Are Slender

The era of bustles and hoop skirts has not returned, it is being approached, according to the style show held yesterday noon at the Illinois Women's Athletic club. Corsets have returned—for at least some women, if they want to wear the suavely fitted tops of the bouffant brocaded evening gowns.

The afternoon gowns abound in lace berthas, usually hanging lower in back than front, and with huge bows of material in the exact location of the bustle and giving a similar curve. Skirts trail in the back and dip on the sides, in ruffles of lace, in scallops of moire, and flowered satin. If buckles exist they, too, are in the back, holding in folds of material at the bustle location. There is a noticeable lack of jewelry.

The evening clothes follow the same general plan, filmy lace draping snug, sleek bodices, skirts trailing backward, bouffant from a waistline nearer the original location than it has been for years. Many of the gowns follow Chanel's idea of a cape back, the long bertha effects trailing the wide, low cut line off the shoulders.

Brocades, moire, and flowered silks predominated at yesterday's show, the evening gowns extremely low cut but softened in neckline.

Dr. C. C. Morrison Will Talk Next Friday About Peace

Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of the Christian Century, will address the women's department of the Chicago Church federation on "Are We in Sight of World Peace," on Friday, Oct. 11, at a luncheon in the Hotel La Salle. The women's department is the delegate body representing the women's societies of the Protestant churches over the Chicago area. Mrs. John W. Lear, president, will preside.

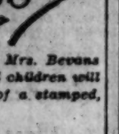
Complaint About Work May Teach Child Idleness



By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

A "Play Booklet," by Mrs. Bevans for mothers of pre-school children will be sent free on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

He came in slowly and greeted every one listlessly—even the baby.

"What's the matter, Don?" said his wife as they all sat down at the table. "Tired?"

"Tired! I'm all in. I've never had such a day, even in the rush season. The chief is impossible. Nobody's life is worth living when he's in the office. I tell you, Mary, I can't stand this work much longer. Figures never were in my line, anyhow," he said and groaned on.

The next morning when the children were playing in the living room, one of the older boys came in to his mother and announced, "I don't want to grow up and have to work. When I do grow up I'm not going to work—or else I'll get an easy job. I don't want to be all tired out all the time the way daddy is."

Have you ever thought, when you groan about how hard you work and how tired you are, that it's all sinking in to the children's minds? And if you stop a minute you'll realize how many people do this much of the time when they mention their work. It's enough to give any child a distaste for grown-upness and a job.

People's work is such a large part of their lives and it can be a source of such great satisfaction, even happiness to them, that it's a pity the words work and hard and tired and hectic should be synonymous in children's minds. Yet they often are. And largely because children so often have fathers who don't like their work or mothers who have to work too hard.

Also it often happens that the grown-ups of a family don't talk about their work when they like it, but only when they don't—or when things go wrong. Then they burst out with their grievances and the children hear it all. They get from all this the idea that work is a hateful and irksome thing, and that idleness is a blessing.

When you feel the need of exploding, remember the young ears that hear everything, and desist—or else balance it by telling about how much you love your job, when you do!

HE WAS LIFELESS AND DESPONDENT

But ALL-BRAN made him wide-awake and well—doctor prescribed it

CONSTIPATION ruins hopes, saps strength. Yet thousands of sufferers have found the way to relieve and prevent this disease. Read how this man rid his system of constipation.

"During the three years before ALL-BRAN cured me, I experienced more embarrassing moments than I care to tell of. Being lifeless, dull, logy and despondent, I could not keep my job. My friends didn't want my company and I was tired of being asked 'What in the world is the matter with you?'

"After spending much money for treatment, I finally found a doctor who advised me to eat ALL-BRAN three times a day. I did this for three months and I didn't need to be told that I looked better . . . I felt better and acted better . . . I am still using ALL-BRAN every morning and have no trouble now whatsoever." (Name and address upon request.)

Guard against constipation by eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to prevent it—to relieve it. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal. Far better than habit-forming drugs and pills.

ALL-BRAN is 100% effective. Doctors recommend it because it promotes natural elimination. Serve it with milk or cream. Use it in cooking—muffins, bread, etc. Delicious recipes on the package. Grocers sell it. Restaurants, hotels, dining-cars service it. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

CHILD'S DRESS.

This small raglan, bloomer outfit for some small maiden is especially pretty when printed and plain batistes or other suitable fabric is used. It is shirred either side of the front and back at the neckline, where it is gathered into a narrow band—allowing all the fullness to fall from the shoulders and neckline, a most comfortable fashion for a child. The sleeves are gathered into narrow cuff bands, and the pockets at either side of the front are useful and decorative. The bloomers, peeping beneath, are gathered into knee bands and show the contrasting color.

The pattern C-2391, comes in sizes 1, 3, 5, 6, and 8 years. Size 5 requires 2⅞ yards of 35 inch material if made of one material.

FARM AND GARDEN

BY PAUL POTTER

On farms where a good deal of roughage is fed in the form of corn fodder, the cured stalks can be utilized to better advantage if they are run through a husker-shredder.

This practice has two major advantages, according to farm equipment experts. It puts the stalk and the leaves of the plant—30 to 40 per cent of its feeding value—in a form which can be utilized easier and more fully. It also eliminates the labor of husking the ears by hand.

When only a limited amount of roughage is available, shredding is a great saver of feed, because little is wasted by handling and feeding. The leaves do not shatter as they often do when the fodder bundles are moved about and less of the shredded feed is wasted by live stock.

In cases where an excess of fodder is raised the method is still an economical one because the cost of husking is saved, and the feed can be handled easier. Many farmers use surplus shredded corn for bedding as it is soft, clean and easily handled in a spreader.

The practice of shredding has become increasingly important in corn belt states menaced by the corn borer. Binder attachments which cut the corn at the surface of the ground facilitate clean plowing and insure getting a majority of borers in the fodder. Shredding the complete plant gives these borers little chance to live through the winter.

Corn should be bound and shocked in the field for at least a month before it is shredded. Ordinarily the machine is stationed in the barnyard, and the roughage blown into a hay mow or empty silo. It may be stacked outside and covered with galvanized roofing or a tarpaulin if there is not room inside. A tractor is generally used for power. The husked corn may be elevated into a wagon or truck from the machine or a sacking device can be used.

Iota Sigma Phi Tea.

Iota Sigma Phi sorority will give a tea tomorrow afternoon at the Chicago College club.

TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Gumbo Hotch-Potch.

The meaning of the term hotch-potch is suggested by the very sound of it. Nevertheless there are many definitions of a hotch-potch, some obsolete because the dish itself originated in time obsolete, or before the fork was invented, or at any rate before Neptune's trident was adapted to table use. It was a spoon dish and a made dish as compared with a roast. It is a stew and soup combined, and was sometimes called a pottage. Today we call it a one-piece dish.

A hotch-potch may contain all the nutrients of a "balanced meal." It has protein in the meat that is used to "aromatize it," vitamins and roughage in the various vegetables that make both substance and seasonings for it, and carbohydrate in the thickening we can use, or the dumplings we may cook in it.

The other day when considering the value of a "point of brisket," with pot and frying pan at hand and knife and board—it was a wonderfully fat piece—I decided for one thing to make a hotch-potch and to call it gumbo, because I would use some okras first scalded and given a cold rinse, in it. And let me say that I have used many a time a piece of steak, cut in bits and cooked in similar ways, that did not yield as tender bits when cooked as this did, but this is a long story, for I even cooked a good part of the piece in water and had but a slight bit of fat on top when I might have had a thick layer. Experimenting with "boiled meat," you see.

First, some suet from the piece was melted in the thick and flat bottomed kettle—not entirely melted but made so sterile that it would keep well for later use—then some sliced onion was sweated in that, with a finely cut up fresh pimento and one sweet red pepper. They were pushed aside and bits of meat rolled in seasoned flour were lightly browned in fat—probably there was not one-half pound of meat in all—the left over flour was then stirred with the vegetables and a quart of cold water added. The whole was stirred until the liquid thickened, then some finely cut celery was added and, finally, some scallions scalded and rinsed, and the pint of okra treated in the same way. Tomato might have been added but the pimento and red pepper had given color.

Tough on the Cake.

Being over in this country a very short while and not speaking very good English, one day I was invited to a luncheon. There was served a delicious cake and I wanted to compliment the hostess on it, so I said, "Your cake is so nice and tough."

The hostess became red in her face and everybody looked dumbfounded. You might know my embarrassment when I found out what it meant.

I have a large paper route, which I recently divided with my brother. I had been in the habit of leaving the paper at little Billy's house at dusk, just as he was eating his supper. But the first day, after making this change, I arrived at his home with the paper in the middle of the afternoon, as he was playing in the yard with some children.

When he saw me he looked surprised, then, glancing overhead at the bright sky, he asked in a puzzled way: "Has somefin' happened to the time?" J. K.

GERMANY TO GIVE DR. STRESEMANN STATE FUNERAL

Von Hindenburg to Follow Cortege on Foot.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—Afoot, President von Hindenburg wishes to follow the bier carrying the remains of Foreign Minister Stresemann when the German statesman is a given a state funeral Sunday. He announced this when he returned to the German capital this morning to pay the greatest tribute he can to the "Abraham Lincoln of Germany."

While elaborate preparations are being made at the reichstag, Brandenburg gate, and the main streets through which the funeral cortége will pass Sunday, the cabinet met today and asked Dr. Curtius, minister of economic affairs, to carry on Dr. Stresemann's work temporarily. The president first asked Chancellor Mueller to take over the post, but Herr Mueller is still convalescing from a severe illness and feels physically unequal to the burden. He suggested Dr. Curtius, who had worked closely with Dr. Stresemann in recent months.

Friends of Press Mourn.

The first mourning meeting for Dr. Stresemann was held in the foreign office this afternoon by members of the foreign office and foreign press working in Germany, while airplanes with mourning streamers circled above the Wilhelmstrasse. Every Friday afternoon for the last four years Dr. Stresemann had made it a point to break away from affairs of state and spend a few hours with representatives of the foreign press informally in one of the reception halls of the foreign office. These meetings were confidential.

This afternon the international press representatives assembled again. His seat was covered with crepe, chrysanthemums, and laurel, while his closest collaborator, Secretary Von Schubert, told the reporters of the eagerness with which Dr. Stresemann always rushed to the Friday afternoon meetings and of the warmth with which he spoke of the hours of relaxation spent at them.

Foreign Flags at Half Mast.

From all parts of Germany delegations are arriving to line the road with their crepe covered flags Sunday when, after a ceremony in the reichstag, the remains of Dr. Stresemann will be brought to rest in the old Berlin cemetery a few feet away from the grave of his father and mother in the simplicity for which he asked. The body today lies in state at his official residence adjoining the foreign office.

From the Rhineland comes word that the French, Belgian, and British armies of occupation have joined the population and placed their flags at half mast in mourning for the great European.

Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the league of nations, is due tomorrow to take part in the funeral.

Body of Bishop Murray to Be in State in Baltimore

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 4.—(AP)—The body of Bishop John Gardner Murray, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, who died suddenly at Atlantic City yesterday, arrived in Baltimore today. Clad in the robes of his office Bishop Murray's body will lie in state before the funeral, presumably in the Chapel of Remembrance of St. Michel and All Angels. Bishop Coadjutor E. T. Helfenstein, who succeeds Bishop Murray as head of the diocese also arrived in Baltimore today and took part in arranging for the funeral to be held at 11 a. m. Monday.

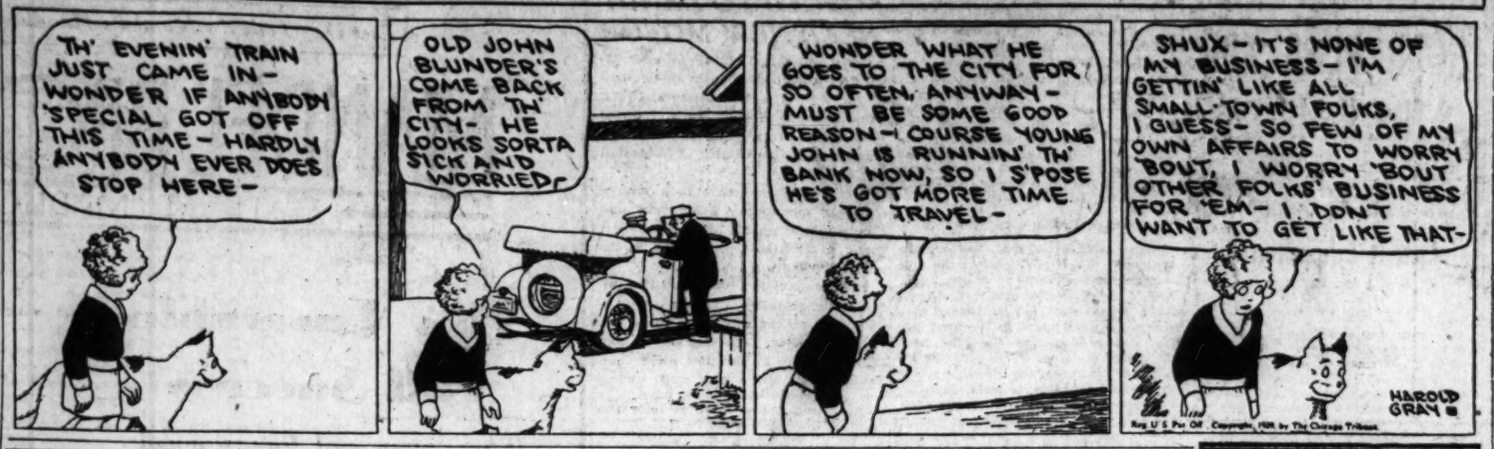
LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: The Traveler Returns



Elmer Praises Broadcast of Rosh Hashonah

Impressive as Last Year's Service, He Says.

BY ELMER DOUGLASS.

The broadcast of the New Year's service of the Temple Sholom, from Medinah temple, through W-G-N, 8 to 9:30, was not only an impressive event but a pleasant reminder of former years when broadcasts of consequential occasions demanding one or more hours of time were of more frequent occurrence then they are now.

As was the broadcast of this same Rosh Hashonah service last year from the same place and through the same station, the service was successful musically and orally. The music by the choir of mixed voices, the organ with Lawrence Goldberg at the console, and in particular the chants and solos by Joel Lay, baritone, were inspiring.

Also it was good again to hear the now familiar voice of Rabbi Abram Hirschberg. His voice and his many sage sayings were appreciated.

The broadcast was made possible by the cooperation of three advertisers, whose half hour periods were donated to the service. I am informed that following the broadcast of this service last year, Jews far from Chicago wrote that they had bought prayer books and assembled around radio receivers for the first services of their faith ever observed in their communities.

The WLS Singers deserve high credit from their program of five-part polyphonic music, 8:30 to 9. Compositions by Wagner, Wood, Morley, and Gibbons, among others, were sung. "The Silver Swan," by Gibbons, was especially fascinating.

The orchestral and vocal programs from KYW, at 7:30 to 8 and 9:30 to 10, were attractive beyond the ordinary.

Wilmot W. Foote, Pioneer Newspaper Man, Is Dead

Wilmot W. Foote, 81 years old, 1404 Berkeley avenue, pioneer Chicagoan and former newspaper writer, died at his home yesterday of pneumonia. Mr. Foote came to Chicago several years before the fire in 1871. He formerly was employed by the Chicago Times and the Chicago Evening Post. His widow survives him. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Boydston chapel, 4227 Cottage Grove avenue. Burial will be in Wiscasset, Me.

CHANGES MIND ON IDENTIFYING BANDIT; JAILED

Martin Flatow, 32 years old, 1806 South Central Park avenue, refused yesterday to identify Richard Heinrich, charged with robbing him, and as a result he and two employés were held in police stations last night on the order of Assistant State's Attorney Charles A. Bellows. A charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice is to be made against them, the prosecutor said.

When Heinrich was arrested last June Flatow identified him as the man who held up Flatow's Riviera billiard parlor at 4750 Broadway on May 11. A few days later he repeated his identification in the felony court and then again before the grand jury. In Judge David's court yesterday, however, he said he must have been mistaken. Th ecase against Heinrich was continued and an investigation started.

Leo Ludlow and Clyde Starling, employés of Flatow, who failed to appear in court yesterday, were taken in custody. Starling said that Flatow had told them that they were mistaken in identifying Heinrich — that the real robber was Henry Nelson, collegiate bandit, who was recently sentenced to the penitentiary.

DRUG, NOT RUM, CAUSES DEATH OF MISS EAGELS

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Jeanne Eagels, star of the stage and screen, died from an overdose of a potent sleep inducing drug, which fatally depressed her heart, and not from alcoholic psychosis, as the first reports had it, City Toxicologist Alexander O. Gettler announced this afternoon.

Dr. Gettler reported that a quantity of alcohol also was found, but added that it was not responsible for death. Miss Eagels dropped dead in the Park Avenue hospital last night while waiting a consultation with her physician, Dr. Edward E. Cowles. She was sitting on a bed talking with Dr. Cowles' assistant, Dr. Alfred Pellegrini, when a sudden convulsion seized her and she collapsed and died almost instantly.

Mrs. Agnes Williams, Wife of Judge, Dies

Mrs. Agnes Gleason Williams, wife of Superior Judge Charles A. Williams, died yesterday in the Illinois Masonic hospital of pneumonia and heart disease. She was 60 years old. She is survived by her husband, a son, Willard L. Williams, and a daughter, Mrs. Vivian Harman of Beverly Hills, Cal. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Rites to Be Held Monday for Attorney A. E. Wallace

Funeral services for Arthur E. Wallace, a patent attorney in Chicago for 30 years, will be conducted Monday in a chapel at 316 West 63d street. Mr. Wallace who, with his wife, lived at the Norwood hotel, 6300 Normal boulevard, died Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. S. Telfer, at Ellison Bay, Wis.

Herbert Dore, President of Court Reporters, Dies

Word of the death in London, England, of Herbert Dore of Chicago, president of the National Stenographic Reporters association, was received here yesterday. Memorial services will be held at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, of which Mr. Dore was a member, at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow. Speakers will be Judge H. Stirling Pomeroy, Kewanee, Ill., and Richard A. Mabey, Minneapolis.

Member of Michigan U. Museum Staff Drowned

Alpena, Mich., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Dr. Jan Metzelaar, 37, member of the staff of the University of Michigan museum and state custodian of fishes, was drowned today while fishing in Grand lake, near here.

DR. W. T. BELFIELD, NOTED PHYSICIAN, IS DEAD AT 73

Dr. William Thomas Belfield, for many years a prominent Chicago physician and well known in international medical circles, died yesterday at his home, 5428 Cornell avenue, following a two months' illness. He was 73 years old.

Dr. Belfield was born in St. Louis. He was educated at the University of Michigan, Rush Medical college, and the University of Vienna. His associates credited him with being the first teacher of bacteriology in this country and with initiating a number of operations now generally practiced. He was a past president of the Chicago Medical society, the Association of Genito-Urinary Surgeons, and Chicago Urological society. He had been on the staff of Chicago Polyclinic since 1888, and was a past professor at Rush Medical college.

Dr. Belfield was a member of the Chicago Athletic club and the Chicago Literary society. He was unmarried. His brother, the late Henry Belfield, was a professor of English at the University of Chicago.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at the Boydston chapel at 4227 Cottage Grove avenue. Burial will be at Rosehill cemetery.

DR. O. M'KELLAR TO BE BURIED IN IOWA TOMORROW

Funeral services for Dr. Orville William McKellar, for thirty-five years a practicing physician and surgeon in Chicago, will be held in Elgin, Ia., his native town, tomorrow. Dr. McKellar died last Wednesday morning in Kingsville, Tex. Dr. McKellar came to Chicago to practice in 1893. He was a professor of surgery in the Jenner Medical college before that institution ceased to exist and for six years was attending physician at the county hospital. He was also consulting surgeon at the Mary Thompson hospital. He is survived by his sister, Hattie, and brother, Lawrence, both of Elgin, Ia.; by his brother, Dr. John Douglas McKellar of Chicago, and another brother, Dr. Milo M. McKellar of Loveland, Okla.

ENLARGE AIRPORT OR LOSE AVIATION RANK, CITY TOLD

Air Line Men Call Field Unsafe for Full Loads.

City officials were warned yesterday by the aviation interests that the municipal airport must be enlarged immediately, or Chicago will lose its position as a focal point in the transcontinental air passenger lines. The present inadequate facilities make it hazardous for passenger planes to land at the airport with full loads, representatives of the aviation industry declared.

Aviation's handicaps in Chicago were outlined at a meeting of city officials, aviation boosters, and representatives of the school board and commercial aviation companies in the office of Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe, who has jurisdiction over the landing field. Several suggestions were made for enlargement of the field and a committee of ten was appointed to study the proposals and report the most feasible plan to Mr. Wolfe.

Asks Larger Airport.

"Wall street will bend the transcontinental routes around Chicago unless there is a change in the facilities," said William Bliss, managing operator of the Universal Aviation corporation. "The airport now is not capable of handling full loads of passengers, which we must carry to make a profit.

"It is a crime to operate in the area with full loads and it will be nearly impossible to have the new thirty-two passenger planes land there. Pilots circle the field waiting to land while the air is full of student planes. We must have room to land safely and we are willing to pay any legitimate rental for our land. The city shouldn't wait for a crash and an investigation before improving the airport."

Separation of the commercial field from that used by the amateur, private and transient planes was suggested by President Caldwell of the school board. He proposed that the city lease the remaining north half of the school board tract until 1936 at the yearly rate of $6 an acre. The southern half of the field would remain the landing field of the commercial lines while the northern half would be developed for the others.

Propose Beach Land Sale.

Sale of the city owned Clarendon beach property, valued at $3,500,000, is a part of this plan. The income from the fund might be used in the development of the north half for private planes and public hangars could be built and rented to private plane owners.

Objections to the sale of the Clarendon property were voiced by Ald. John A. Massen [48th] and Eugene S. Taylor, manager of the Chicago plan commission. The site is ideal for a municipal college, according to the former, and central uptown Chicago would fight the sale. The alderman suggested trading the airport property of the school for Clarendon beach and the city's property at Madison and Wells streets. A school office building could be erected on the latter site, he said.

FIRST "AIR" ARREST

The first arrest in Cook county's campaign against irregular flying was made yesterday. Edward L. Faulkner, 26, test pilot for the Monarch Aircraft company at Rockford, Ill., was taken into custody in that city by Cook county policeman and brought to Morton Grove, where he was locked up on a charge of violating the state aviation law.

Maj. Ralph Royce, county air supervisor, and Lieut. L. J. Laird of the highway police charge Falkner with teaching students to fly without a proper department of commerce license. One of his students, according to Maj. Royce, was Charles Kron, pilot of the unlicensed plane which collided in midair with a licensed plane of Walter W. Meyer causing the death of both pilots and two passengers in the planes at Northbrook on Sept. 14.

Faulkner, Maj. Royce said, had given instruction to other students recently while operating a plane on a roadside field on Dundee road west of Waukegan road and had received compensation for this instruction contrary to the state law. Lieut. Laird said that department of commerce records showed that Faulkner had failed in his examination for a transport pilot's license. Faulkner will be tried before Judge W. W. Ward at Morton Grove next Thursday afternoon.

Aviation Notes

A new Sikorsky amphibion, named "The Northern Light," was flown to Chicago from New York yesterday for delivery to the Public Service company of Northern Illinois. Aboard the plane when it landed at the 8th street ramp were George P. Foster, chairman of the aviation committee of the Association of Commerce, J. L. Hecht, vice president of the Public Service company and other officers of the company who boarded the plane at Lansing for the flight here. The plane was flown by Pilot Arthur L. Caperton of New York.

The Chicago regional plan commission has surveyed and marked 200 sites for airports in the Chicago area, Robert Kingery, general manager of the association who told of the survey at a meeting of the association's directors in the Burnham building yesterday, said that the 200 fields so far surveyed were exclusive of the 29 airports now operating within a 50 mile radius of Chicago. He predicted that scores of these potential airports will later be put into use.

President Portes Gil of Mexico yesterday issued to the governors of the states a list of the international airports at which all American and other foreign planes may stop. The decree does away with many difficulties that international air transportation has suffered up to the present, as planes now have provisions for crossing the border and stopping at any of the ports indicated. These include the states of Tamaulipas, Coahuila, Chihuahua, Sonora, Lower California, Quintanaroo and Yucatan. The ports listed are Matamoros, New Laredo, Piedras, Negras, Juarez, Nogales, Mexicali and Tiajuana on the northern frontier and Cozumel, Progreso, Quintanaroo on the gulf coast, and Mariscal on the Guatemala border.

SAFETY EXPERTS HEAR PLEA FOR STRICT AIR LAW

Asks U. S. to Compel the Latest Equipment.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Governmental restriction of passenger carrying air lines which are not equipped with the latest safety aids was suggested yesterday by Lester D. Seymour, general manager of the National Air transport, in a speech at the closing session of the National Safety congress at the Stevens hotel.

Mr. Seymour pointed out that with the rapid expansion of air routes in the United States a number of routes not provided with all the known aids to navigation have been established and that federal restriction of such lines is as reasonable as government requirements of certain standards in instruction and licensing of pilots and requirements for the airworthiness of planes.

Radio Holds Possibilities.

"Radio, with the possibilities it offers in the communication of weather information and instructions between the airplane and the ground, probably furnishes greater possibilities for increasing safety in air transportation than any other single thing put into practice during the last year," Mr. Seymour stated.

Adequate aids to aviation include lighting facilities for night flying, intermediate fields for emergency landings, radio beacons and proper ground communication systems for dispatching and reporting the positions of airplanes, Mr. Seymour declared.

"These ground facilities as well as the possible equipment of the airplane in the matter of instruments and radio are essential to any route set up to be flown on a business like basis," he said. "Instances in the history of flying where disaster might have been averted had these aids been present are too numerous to leave any doubt as to their necessity."

Leave Decision to Pilot.

In the carrying of mail and express exclusively when the pilot is the sole occupant of the plane it is often possible to fly under weather conditions which would not be permissible with a cargo of passengers, he pointed out. He recommended that the pilot himself should be left the sole judge of his ability to fly under any circumstances. Under no conditions, he said, should a pilot be ordered to fly against his wish.

"Airplanes and instrument flying have progressed to a point which will now permit the safe navigation of the air under weather conditions which a few years ago would have been considered entirely impossible so long as the terminal field is clear," Mr. Seymour stated.

"As yet no satisfactory instrument has been devised for the accurate measuring of distances in small units, from the surface of the ground to the plane. The altimeter which measures the distance of the airplanes above sea level in rather large units is by no means entirely satisfactory."

C. E. Pettibone of Boston, newly elected president of the national safety council, in his first public address yesterday urged a strict drivers' license law for Illinois and all other states as a means of reducing auto traffic deaths.

SOVIET PLANE FORCED TO LAND; NEED NEW MOTOR

Craig, Alaska, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Bringing first word of their own safety, two of the four Russian aviators, flying from Moscow to New York, reached here today after being forced down because of motor trouble at Waterfall on Dall island.

The soviets said that both motors of their monoplane went dead and they would be unable to continue their flight to Seattle until a new motor was shipped from that city.

The Russians left Sitka at 6:42 a. m. yesterday. Heavy weather was encountered all the way down the coast, about 200 miles. The ship was swooping from side to side not more than twenty feet above the water when the left motor began to miss. It stopped and a few minutes later the right motor also went dead.

The plane landed at Waterfall, at the southeastern end of Alaska. While two of the Russians stayed by their plane the others made their way across to this small settlement on Prince of Wales island. Craig will be headquarters for communication until relief comes.

Russia Seeks Aid of Jewish Children in War on Faith

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 4.—Soviet authorities have circularized a memorandum in connection with the Hebrew holidays instructing Hebrew children to report in case their parents observe the rituals. The children are not permitted to feast and must attend soviet schools, which endeavor through anti-religious propaganda to eradicate religion.

Referee—Joe Magidsohn. Umpire—H. G. Dohm. Field judge—R. W. Hurgel. Head linesman—Joe Lipp.

Northwestern will test its 1929 grid strength at Dyche stadium today in a double header with the Butler Bulldogs of Indianapolis and Cornell college of Mount Vernon, Ia. An opening day crowd of 32,000 is expected for the twin encounters, including 10,000 Boy Scouts and Y. M. C. A. boys of the Chicago district. The Butler game will be played first and is scheduled to start at 1:45.

The two visiting aggregations are expected to provide Coach Dick Hanley's charges with plenty of competition for the first tilts of the year. Butler especially is well fortified with a seasoned crew, having ten men in the starting lineup who opened the game here a year ago. Booz, sophomore full back, is the only new man in the lineup.

Rivals Drill in Stadium.

Both teams arrived in Evanston yesterday and repaired immediately to the stadium, where they engaged in a lengthy signal drill and warming up exercises.

Coach Hanley gave his boys a rest after a week of strenuous scrimmage sessions. The final workout yesterday consisted of a brief forward passing drill and terminated with a snappy signal practice. The squad appeared to be in fine fettle and properly tuned for the initial combats.

A few last minute changes in the Purple lineup were announced by Hanley at the close of practice. Bob Clark is slated to open in place of Bickey Erickson at center, while Jack Ring was given the call over Red Wadsworth at right tackle.

Four veterans will comprise the Wildcat back field at the start. Bruder and Calderwood will be at the half back posts, Hanley at quarter, and Russ Bergherm at full.

CHICAGO SQUAD READY

A. A. Stagg presents his thirty-ninth University of Chicago football team this afternoon at 1:45 o'clock. Beloit and Lake Forest will be the opponents. Stagg's squad contains about fifteen men of Big Ten caliber, or thereabouts, but the balance of the aggregation is just so many names. Injuries would wreck whatever hopes the old man has of making a good showing in conference competition.

Campbell Dickson, former Maroon star, was coaching at Beloit last year and scheduled the game today. He believed, it is said, that he could give his old coach's team a beating. Dickson is not at Beloit now, but reports have sifted in to confirm his opinion of the team's ability.

A Young Stagg to Play.

Stagg will probably start Capt. Kelly and Jerstid at the end posts, with Paige and Froberg at the tackles, Beattie and either Brislen or Casale at guards, and Marshall at center. Van Pelt, Knudson and Temple are slated for three of the back field positions, with the starting quarter back a matter of conjecture.

Paul Stagg, 150 pound son of the Maroon coach, has been lining up with the varsity in all the workouts this week and on that basis should get a chance to call signals today. However, there is a tradition about the Midway that Stagg always starts veterans in the first game, and for that reason Bluhm is a strong possibility, as he is a senior and Paul is playing his first year of competition.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—For the fourteenth time in 30 years football teams from Notre Dame and Indiana will fight it out for supremacy of the gridiron tomorrow afternoon. It will be homecoming for Indiana. Both coaches report their teams in good condition for the contest.

A horde of alumni and state football fans were on their way for Hoosierdom's gridiron classic today. A joint women's and men's powwow was held tonight in the men's gymnasium. It was addressed by Gov. Harry Leslie. More than 1,500 students, alumni, and fans were served a banquet. Night football between freshman "Army" and "Navy" teams was enacted under glaring lights of the big field house.

Teams Drill in Secret.

The two football teams, after brief signal drills in secret, withdrew to their training quarters. Notre Dame went to a hotel in Martinsville. Pat Page led his Indiana warriors to the Bloomington Country club for the night to keep them from the homecoming crowd until shortly before the game.

"For 30 years Indiana and Notre Dame have been meeting in athletic contests," said Rockne tonight. "These occasions always have been marked by intense interest on the part of the Hoosier state because of the fine sportsmanship and keen friendly rivalry. In the early days Indiana was generally successful, but in recent years Notre Dame had somewhat of an edge.

MICHIGAN MEETS STATE

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Traditional rivals for more than a quarter century, Michigan and Michigan State will battle for the 24th time in their annual grudge match under the tutelage of two of the youngest coaches in the game.

Both Harry Kipke and Jim Crowley have great athletic records. Both are in their first year at their present posts, and they represent two of the famous systems of football—Yost and Rockne.

Neither team knows how strong it really is, after easy games last week, but the general guess is that Michigan will be too strong for the farmers. The Spartans, in fact, have only scored three points on the Wolves in the last decade or so, and the opinion is that Crowley's minions will be lucky to score on a Maize and Blue aggregation which looks now to have the best prospects since the 1926 champions. The biggest State threat lies in the punting of Roger Grove.

Michigan Has Air Attack.

Coach Kipke spent an hour and a half trying to pound the Spartan style of play into his men this afternoon. He had the frosh go through plays for the third time this week, and it is thought that the Wolves will have a stone wall defense. Lineups:

Glenna Collett, Mrs. Pressler Play for Golf Title Today

BY HARLAND ROHM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 4. — California will get the thistle twined trophy for the national women's golf championship for a year, even if the women's indignation meetings this week demanding the tournament be held on the Pacific coast next fall are ignored.

Glenna Collett, a recent adoption, playing from the Cypress Point club on the Del Monte peninsula, and Mrs. Leona Pressler, native daughter of Los Angeles, came through the semi-finals today.

The fatal sixteenth hole with its fearsome water carry for the second shot which has blasted so many hopes, saw the finish of both matches. Miss Collett again came from behind to beat Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City, 3 and 2, after the western champion had led most of the way. Mrs. Pressler won from Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis., by the same score.

Should Glenna be victor tomorrow it will be the first time any woman has won the national championship four times. Miss Collett won it first in 1922 and repeated at three year intervals in 1925 and 1928. Mrs. Pressler's outstanding achievement was winning the western championship in 1927 and 1928. They have never met in a match before.

Stymies Save Miss Collett.

Miss Collett again played badly on the first nine and was lucky to be only two down to Mrs. Hill at the turn. But after the ninth she had only one bad hole, winning five and halving two.

Glenna hit the green with her approaches on only one of the first seven holes. She was outdriving Mrs. Hill but not enough to make any difference in their second shots. She trapped her second on the first hole but both got home in three and they halved it. Mrs. Hill seemed sure of a win on the second with a two foot putt to sink, but Glenna laid her a stymie and they halved it. Glenna bunkered her tee shot on the short hole and Mrs. Hill won with a normal three.

The next five holes were halved, but Mrs. Hill passed up chances to win. The fourth was orthodox fours, but on the fifth Glenna's tee shot landed in a pit and bounced out. She was short with her second and chipped up to three feet. Mrs. Hill, nicely on in two, rolled her approach putt to two feet and then both missed the short ones.

Glenna sprayed her approach into the gallery and wound up in a bunker on the sixth, but blasted out and sank an 18 foot curling putt for a half in fours.

Mrs. Hill Equals Par.

Mrs. Hill nearly hit the pin with her tee shot on the ninth, and after Glenna had played wide, chipped on and taken a putt, the western champion holed it for a two. That gave her 37 for the nine, four under par, against Glenna's 40, and put her two up.

Glenna made short work of the tenth, hitting a magnificent shot to the green, while Mrs. Hill pulled her approach, pitched to five feet and missed the putt for a half.

Mrs. Hill pulled her spoon into a trap on the eleventh, pitched up 18 feet past the hole and holed the

AHA! OLD VILLAIN FOOTBALL LURKS ON SERIES SCENE

With Weather Man's Aid He May Do Harm.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—The impending world series has been impending so long that it begins to suffer somewhat by comparison with the football productions, many of which will draw between 65,000 and 80,000 customers at a flat rate of $4 per customer. With the weather turning blowy and a bit cold, it is quite possible that postponements will extend the series until Oct. 19, when Notre Dame will be playing Wisconsin in Chicago and the University of California will be playing Penn at Franklin field, which is only a distance of a dollar as the taxicab plies from the home lot of the Philadelphia ball club.

So wherever the ball game should happen to occur in the not inconceivable event of there being a world series game on that date, it will be no problem at all to obtain tickets because not even the politicians, to whom the best tickets necessarily are allotted every year, will be eager to attend.

It is a peculiarity of the so-called national pastime that the customers cannot maintain their enthusiasm even for the world series under pressure of physical hardships which the same customers endure rather joyously at football games.

They've Been Empty Before.

Several times during the last few years I have noticed quite glaring expanses of unoccupied seats in the wings of grandstands at world series games and I would suggest that any customers who feel any sense of hurt or slight at being overlooked in the distribution of tickets make a point of hanging around the pavilion entrances on days subsequent to the first day in either city. There are generally a number of busy gentlemen with worried expressions operating among the crowds with tickets for sale and they become more worried and their price list aristocratic as the hour of the game approaches. It is my idea that if the world series should happen to be unfinished business on or about the 19th of October, the parallel between football and baseball in the football season will be quite deadly and the world series attendance will constitute a warning to the baseball industry never again to challenge football in its own season.

Papers Minimize Baseball.

In this regard the newspapers have been minimizing baseball lately and emphasizing football, even to the extent of withdrawing staff baseball

Cubs Nip Reds in Tenth, 6-3; Victory Number 19 for Root

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 4.—Charley Root, the young man who is scheduled to pitch the world series opener in Chicago Tuesday, went in to finish a game this afternoon for Bob Osborne. For a while it appeared he had stepped in just in time to get his feet wet, but the ultimate outcome was that he got credit for his 19th victory of the season. The final result was a 6 to 3 victory for the Cubs over the Reds in ten innings.

The score was 3 to 2 in favor of the Cubs when Charley took his place in the center of the diamond in the last of the eighth. He walked Swanson, who moved to second on Critz's sacrifice and came in with the tying run when Walker singled to right. Then it was Charley's game to win or lose.

The champs didn't do anything in the ninth, but in the tenth they accomplished considerable. Cuyler and Stephenson both waited out Eppa Rixey for walks and the bases were full when Tolson hammered a single off Kelly's glove. Zach Taylor singled to left, scoring Cuyler and Stevie. When Sukeforth gummed up the throw to the plate, Tolson reached third and Taylor second. Root struck out, but McMillan sent out a sacrifice hit that scored the final run.

The champions started out like they intended to stay at bat all afternoon. McMillan opened with a triple and scored on Beck's single to center. Hornsby singled to center, putting Beck on third. The Rajah took second when the play was made on Beck. At this point, old Eppa Rixey called a halt. He threw out Wilson, then Cuyler grounded to Stripp, who threw out Beck at the plate, Hornsby taking third. Kiki stole second and Stephenson walked, jamming the bases. Grimm ended the session with a tap to Eppa.

The Cubs added a pair in the third. With one down, Hornsby doubled off the right field screen. Sukeforth got under Wilson's popup but Cuyler walked. Stephenson singled, scoring Hornsby and putting Cuyler on third. Cuyler and Stevie tried a double steal. It was headed off, but in the jiggering between third and home Kelly came in in time to drop a throw to the plate and Cuyler scored. Ford threw out Grimm.

Moore and Tolson went in for Wilson and Grimm in the last half of fifth but Cuyler and Stevie were requested to remain at work that the team might retain half a murderers' row.

Browns Will Release Howley, St. Louis Hears

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 4.—(AP)—The St. Louis Post-Dispatch today said that Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, is expected to announce Sunday that he will not renew the managerial contract of Dan Howley, and that Howley will announce he has severed connections permanently with the St. Louis American league club.

KIKI GREATEST! AND HEATHCOTE IS ACE IN HOLE

Al Simmons' Power Balances Scale.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

If Joe McCarthy and old Connie Mack should happen into a debate over the defensive merits of the outfielders they'll employ in the nearby world series, an impartial jury would almost be forced to render a draw verdict.

There isn't much to choose between Simmons, Haas, and Miller as one unit and Stephenson, Wilson, and Cuyler as the other. Individually, the findings might be different and there'd be more alterations of ability on attack was included, but this has to do only with what can, or may, happen in the way of catching flies, coming up with grounders and throwing.

If experience, both season and world series, should be tossed in it might till the scale in the Cubs' favor, but not enough to shout about.

Al Good Fly Ball Judge.

Al Simmons, Mack's outfielding ace, is known principally for his ball whacking proclivities, but along with his ability on attack he follows a rather artful way of conducing himself on defense. He is not flashy or spectacular. His throwing arm and his speed afoot are not much above the average but because of good judgment on fly balls he can move around with the best of them. If Simmons starts hitting the first day he will be that much more enthusiastic about making an extra effort in the field.

Stephenson, who must patrol the same territory as Simmons, is underestimated as a fielder. He never has lived down the fact that the Cleveland club once released him for shortcomings in this particular. Members of teams which play against him day after day for a full season will tell you the Cleveland club erred.

Stevie isn't as fast as he might be. His arm is only fair. But, like Simmons, he can judge a fly ball almost the instant it pops off the bat. He seldom drops a ball once he gets his hands on it, even if he has to leave his feet.

Hack Has Fighter's Heart.

In center field it is a matter of Hack Wilson, a veteran of the Giants' unsuccesaful 1924 series campaign, against George Haas. Here there might be just a bit of an advantage for the youthful Mackman.

Wilson plays a bit deep because he likes to protect himself against going back for long drives. By playing deep he naturally leaves considerable of a gap between himself and the infield. Some of this is offset by the fact that, like Stephenson, he is more than passably fair at dashing in to stage diving, elbow skinning catches.

As for the throwing ability of the pair there is not enough difference to count. Neither do they stand out as men owning great arms, but in center this is not as important a feature as in right or left. One thing we know about Hack is that his heart isn't weak. Recently he has taken more razzing than any other player in the business and he thrives on the treatment.

Kiki Has Great Arm.

In right there is a distinct lean toward the National league's entry. Bing Miller, who has been wandering around the American league for more than a few seasons without ever being accorded the title of star may be good enough as a fly catcher and a few other things, but he doesn't rate with Cuyler. The one thing against Cuyler is that he is inclined to be fretful about little mishaps on the field.

Neither of the majors in recent years has known a man of Cuyler's grace. Whether he is hitting, running, throwing, or catching he has what they call rhythm of motion. His speed afoot makes it easy for him to cover a vast amount of outfield space. His powerful, accurate arm discourages runners going from first to third on singles in his direction. It also makes them hesitate about scoring unless the odds appear greatly in their favor, whether it is a matter of running home from second or in from third after a catch.

Heathcote Great Sub.

In the event something should happen to a regular outfielder, McCarthy will have less cause to worry than Mack might have. McCarthy owns Heathcote, who with almost any other club in either major would be good enough for regular employment.

Defensively Heathcote has the same speed, accuracy, and throwing skill possessed by Cuyler. The difference is that the former is not quite as effective with the bat.

Mack, if he encounters injuries among his fly chasing trio, will have to turn to men he has retained or picked up merely because they were the best the market affords. One is Walter French, who is at least a reliable fly catcher. Two others are Lebourveau, who has passed in and out of the majors several times, and Summa, who served several years at Cleveland without ascending to stardom.

GOLD MINT WINS LENETA LANE IN ROUSING FINISH

Passes Kulaman in Final Sprint.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Gold Mint is getting to be quite an all around race horse.

When he began his Chicago campaign early last spring the players backed him when the track was muddy. They ignored him when the going was fast. But lately Gold Mint has been showing sparkling speed in any kind of going. And because his trials were so good the big crowd at Hawthorne yesterday backed him to win the Leneta Lane purse over the cardboard track.

Stages Rousing Finish.

Gold Mint didn't disappoint his followers, but he had to stage one of the most rousing finishes of his career to get up and head Kulaman of the Nevada Stock Farm stable after trailing for most of the way. Water Lad, with a big following, wound up in third place.

Kulaman, with the tall, thin boy R. Morrison, who rides many long shots to victory, galloped out in front soon after the barrier lifted. He continued to make the pace right to within the shadow of the finish line. Then Jockey Jack Parmelee cracked his whip and whispered, "Go on, Gold Mint." Gold Mint stepped right along past Kulaman and was going away at the finish by a length and a half. In a few more jumps Water Lad would have caught the whipped Kulaman.

Parmelee Scores Double.

Gold Mint ran the six furlongs in 1:12, and in the mutuels he paid $4.68 to win, $3.06 to place, and $2.24 to show. Kulaman paid $4.36 to place and $2.86 to show. Water Lad, an equal second choice with Kulaman, was quoted $2.74 to show.

The victory made it possible for Jockey Parmelee to round out a double, for he came right back in the fifth race and by some clever riding in the stretch got the outsider Dubric up in time to nip Governor Seth by nearly a length. George Groom suddenly came to life, raced close up with the leaders most of the way, and saved third money. Any other jockey but Rideout might have won on him. The boy Rideout has cost the Valley Lake stable people lots of money by his bungling rides this season.

Dubric Pays $14.38.

Dubric's last race was brilliant, but his backers overlooked him and he paid $14.38 in the mutuels to win. Governor Seth had been the favorite.

Fred M. Grabner's Chicago silks were carried to victory unexpectedly by Tyrol in the six furlong second race. Tyrol had been trying to win all season, but this was the first time he met a hand he could defeat. He got the decision by a close margin over Charm, with Black Beetle third. In the mutuels Tyrol paid $34.84 to win.

Gooch, Reds' Backstop, to Quit Baseball for Business

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Johnnie Gooch, the Reds' regular catcher, having accepted a business position, will retire from baseball at the close of the present season, he announced today. He was obtained from Brooklyn last spring in a trade which sent Val Picinich, holdout catcher, to the Robins. He batted more than .300 last year.

Eastern Gold Cup Favorites at Hawthorne

Two more eastern contenders for the $25,000 added Hawthorne Gold Cup to be run Monday arrived at the west side course yesterday. They were Sun Beau, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's flashy handicap star, and Distraction from the Wheatley stable which will run coupled in the betting with Diavolo.

Trainer Bill Irvine, who arrived with Sun Beau, made no secret of his belief that Sun Beau will carry away the gold cup. "He beat Diavolo a week ago, didn't he?" said Mr. Irvine. "And since then he has won the Havre de Grace clup. He will smother Misstep with his speed."

Diavolo Works Out.

Diavolo, the Saratoga cup and Jockey Club gold cup winner, was out on the Hawthorne course yesterday morning. He wasn't asked for a speed test, but performed his task so easily he won many followers.

Misstep also galloped lazily around the course. He is ready for the race of his life, Trainer Lowenstein said. But the Misstep followers are much concerned over track conditions. They want a lightning fast course for the race.

Wheatley Enters Favorite.

President John C. Shank said the advance sale of reserved seats indicates that the greatest crowd ever to visit the Hawthorne course will be on hand when the Gold Cup is decided.

There was every indication yesterday that the Wheatley stable entry of Diavolo and Distraction will be the post time favorite, with Misstep the second choice, and Sun Beau next.

COLGATE TESTS WISCONSIN'S GRID PROWESS TODAY

West vs. East

WISCONSIN.		COLGATE.
Goebbels	L. E.	Stromille
Lubashevich	L. T.	Huntington
Lathan	L. G.	Doyle
Unger	C.	Cox [C]
Parks [C]	R. G.	Gilbon
E. Smith	R. T.	Haines
Bear	R. E.	Abruzzinio
Bohr	Q. B.	Block
Pugsill	L. H.	M. Hart
Bailey	R. H.	Dowler
Gnabah	F. B.	Mackluso

Referee — Birch of Earlham. Umpire — Skinner of Chicago. Field Judge—Huett of Michigan. Head linesman—Huston of Parsons.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—A big maroon team from Colgate university, Wisconsin's first eastern opponent in thirty years, tomorrow invades Camp Randall stadium for the principal intersectional gridiron struggle of the day. Coach Andy Kerr and his squad arrived in Madison tonight. The Badgers, untried this season except for a doubleheader with South Dakota state and Ripon college, looked strong in their final workout tonight after a week of uncertain performance both on defense and offense. Thistlethwaite does not underestimate Colgate, whose starting lineup will include all letter men. Thistlethwaite observed that Dowler, right half, and Stollwreck, who alternates with him, can outrun anybody on the Badger squad.

Wisconsin will enter the game with a few pounds advantage of weight in the line due to the presence of Milo Lubratovich, 218 pound tackle, and Ken Kruger, center, who scales 205. The Badger backfield, however, must put two sophomores, Pacetti and Gnabah, against the experience of Hart, Dowler, Stollwreck and Yablok, plus the bone crushing plunges of Mackuso, full back, who weighs 210 pounds.

The Wisconsin gridders will spring a new note in autumn fashions tomorrow when they take the fields in pants decorated with a wide streak of cardinal red down the back of each leg. Two Wisconsin backs, Gnabah and Behr, will hide their faces behind protecting leather masks. A crowd of 70,000 persons, including several hundred Boy Scouts and high school football teams will view the game.

AGGIES AT PURDUE

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Dr. McMillan's Kansas Aggie eleven and Jimmy Phelan's Boilermakers were encamped here tonight awaiting the opening whistle for their intersectional meeting tomorrow.

Both elevens engaged in light workouts this afternoon. Phelan indicated he would start his strongest available combination. Five veterans from last year, along with a sophomore and a transplanted full back, probably will appear in the forward wall, while Purvis and Yunevich are expected to team with the veterans Welch and Harmeson in the back field.

Preceding the contest the junior-senior parade, an annual opening game feature, will be held. Lineups:

PURDUE.		KANSAS AGGIES.
Conway	L. E.	Towler
Vasilkov	L. T.	Crookshire
Sears	L. G.	Yeager
Dwight	C.	Barr
Berner	R. G.	Tackwell

Rackle	R. E.	Daniels
Harmeson	Q. B.	Evans
Welch	L. H.	Fiser
Purvis	R. H.	Nigro
Yunevich	F. B.	Wiggins

Referee—Dr. F. A. Lambert [Ohio State]. Umpire—E. E. Dennie [Brown]. Field judge—E. C. Cortis [Chicago]. Head linesman—Dr. W. E. Muldoon [Cornell university].

NAGURSKI SHIFTED

In the final workout tonight Spears had his husky 200 pound fighter back in the line after two days of work at full back. Arthur Pharmer was sent to that back field post.

MINNESOTA.		COE.
Anderson	L. E.	Harper
Oberhauser	L. T.	Madden
Tschumbach	L. G.	Senff
Gil	C.	Allen
Nelson	R. G.	Kruse
Lieto	R. T.	Burget
Turner	R. E.	Koons
Bunny	Q. B.	Hines
Swiontkowski	L. H.	Byrnes-Barrows

Pharmer	F. B.	Frisbee

IOWA IN NEW STADIUM

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Iowa football men worked out in the new $500,000 stadium tonight in final preparation for tomorrow's game with Monmouth.

Coach Burt Ingwersen sent his proteges through brief drill in punting, passing and signal formations. The Hawkeyes wore the old gold road jerseys which will distinguish them from Monmouth men.

Pignatelli, quarter back; Mastrogiovy, end, and Tousey, full back, were in the varsity. Possible last minute decision of the Hawkeyes eligibility committee makes Ingwersen's lineup doubtful.

BUCKEYES IN OPENER

Columbus, O., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—With three positions still in doubt, the Ohio State Buckeyes concluded preparations today for their opening game against Wittenberg here tomorrow. Coach Williaman was undecided about his starting lineup.

It was definitely decided that George Pasch will play quarter back. The status of Allan Holman, handicapped with an injured ankle, was in doubt, but if the team physician decides the latter is fit to play, Williaman will send him in at half back.

Morris Wins Advertisers' Golf with 109

The Western Advertisers' Golf association held its final tournament of the year at Park Ridge yesterday, T. J. Morris emerging as the winner of the Directors' trophy, the season's big prize. His score was 136—27—109 for 27 holes.

J. A. Chief Bender won the President's cup for members who had played in three tournaments, with a low net for the 27 holes of 122—17—106. It was somewhat of a field day for him, as he won three other prizes. He took low net for 27 holes straight play, tied for second in the fewest putts for 27 holes and was a member of the low net foursome.

John H. Victor of Ridgemore had low gross score, shooting 41—38—37—116. H. W. Markward of Brookwood was next with 38—42—40—120.

George H. Hartman, formerly captain of the University of Chicago golf team and club champion at Midlothian several times, was elected president of the association, succeeding H. K. Clark. The list of prize winners:

Low gross, 27 holes—John H. Victor, 41—75—116; second, H. W. Markward, 38—82—120.

Low net, 27 holes—J. A. Bender, 123—17—106; second, B. W. Cooke, 140—33—107.

Least putts, 27 holes—J. W. Cullen Jr., 48; second, J. A. Bender, L. M. Bishop, tied, 49.

Low gross foursome, afternoon, 18 holes—H. W. Markward, J. H. Victor, W. F. Lockridge, C. D. Freeman, 342.

Low net, afternoon, 18 holes—C. H. Shattuck, J. A. Bender, J. W. Cullen Jr., Wallace Patterson, 297.

HORNSBY CAN WIN 2D PLACE IN N. L. HITTING

Although it's virtually impossible for Rogers Hornsby to win the National league batting crown for the 1929 season, the Rajah can, by hitting safely in four times at bat in each of the two remaining games, reach a .389 average. That figure would exceed by two per centage points the mark he made last year when he beat out Paul Waner for league honors.

If Hornsby gets eight hits in as many times at bat his safeties would total 236 and his aggregate number of attempts at the plate would be 606. Those figures would bring his batting average to .389 and, undoubtedly, second place in the batting lists.

Lefty O'Doul, the Phillies slugger, has first place clinched with a .396 average. Unless he breaks a leg in the remaining games he cannot be dislodged.

In two attempts yesterday against the Reds, the Rajah clicked with two hits, lifting his average to .381, three points behind Babe Herman of Brooklyn. Standing of the Big Six leaders follows:

	G.	Ab.	R.	H.	Pct.
O'Doul, Phillies	152	627	147	248	.396
Herman, Robins	145	565	105	217	.384
Hornsby, Cubs	154	598	155	228	.381
Simmons, Athletics	141	570	111	209	.367
Foxx, Athletics	147	509	122	181	.356
Ruth, Yankees	133	491	121	170	.346

WALKER, TRAINER FOR ARCHIBALD STABLES, DIES

George Walker, trainer of H. Kellar Archibald stables, died of heart disease Thursday night at the latter's Archwood Manor home in Plains, Va. Walker had been in charge of Archibald's breeding establishment for the last five years.

Previous to working for Archibald, Walker trained horses for Baron Weinberg in Germany. His body will be shipped to Memphis, Tenn., where he will be buried tomorrow. He is survived by his widow.

Mr. Archibald said last night that Walker was one of the old school, along with Hildreth, who also died last month. Mr. Archibald will leave tonight for Memphis to attend the funeral.

NEW COMMITTEE AND POLICY RULE MIDWEST A. C.

With the appointment of a new athletic committee, the Midwest Athletic club, Hamlin and Madison streets, a new policy of athletics for members and competitive teams will be adopted, has been announced.

Julian T. Fitzgerald, reappointed chairman, has as his lieutenant, Fred R. Sargent, and on his committee are James P. McWhirter, James W. Reedy, Dr. Wade C. Harker, and Dr. O. V. Anderson.

The first club activity announced for the winter season is a boxing show in the club gymnasium Wednesday.

Nine Autos Entered in Milwaukee Sunday Races

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—The entry list of the 500 kilo stock car race Sunday at South Milwaukee speedway has been closed, it was announced today by Grover Horn, director. Nine light cars of different makes have been entered.

Lindblom vs. New Trier Tops Prep Grid Schedule Today

Two of the strongest prep teams in the Chicago district clash today when Lindblom of the City league and New Trier of the Suburban league meet in their annual game at Normal park. Coach E. L. Moore's eleven has rolled up victories in all three of its starts this year, and looms as a dangerous contender for another city title.

In Capt. Febel and Paul Schabes, Lindblom has two of the most versatile players in the league. Coach Walt Aschenbach's team was co-champion of the Suburban league with Evanston last year, and although several veterans were graduated, a fine crop of rookies turned up and showed that they could play a bit themselves by routing Fenger, 45 to 0, in their opening game last week.

Austin Looms as Threat.

Another game which is attracting considerable interest is that between Austin and St. Mel at Mills stadium. The City leaguers proved that they'll be in the running for the city championship by defeating Oak Park last week.

The feature game in the West Suburban race brings together two old rivals, Maine and York, on the latter's field. Maine has won its first two games, and looks to be the stronger of the two, ten veterans having returned this year.

Englewood Meets South Bend.

Tilden Tech and Englewood of the central section will journey to Kankakee and South Bend, respectively, for today's games. Coach Palmer's team, headed by Ponzevic and Wolf, stars of Englewood's championship baseball nine, has rolled up three victories, including a 14 to 0 decision over Waite High of Toledo, O. The Techs won their last two games, after Lane nosed them out by a point in their opener.

Four Catholic league teams will swing into action against each other today, although the games will have no bearing on the league standing. St. Leo will meet St. Philip on the latter's grounds, while St. Ignatius will invade De Paul.

Prep Games Today

Lindblom vs. New Trier at Normal Park.
Austin vs. St. Mel at Mills stadium.
Parker vs. Hyde Park at White City.
Bowen at Oak Park.
York at Maine.
Englewood at South Bend, Ind.
Tilden Tech at Kankakee, Ill.
St. Leo at St. Philip.
St. Ignatius at De Paul.

Glenna Collett, Mrs. Pressler Golf Finalists

downhill putt for a half. Glenna squared the match with a five on the 550 yard twelfth. Mrs. Hill was in the rough with her first and second shots and banged her third over the green under a bush. Her niblick pitch hit the bank of the green and stopped short.

Glenna went up for the first time on the next hole. She pitched safely to the green, and Mrs. Hill hit the top of a trap, fell back into it and was barely out with a blast. The fourteenth brought the second stymie. Glenna played it badly, being bunkered on her drive, coming out short and being short with her third. Her run-up was far too hard, but hit the pin and stopped five feet away. Mrs. Hill putted to a foot, but Glenna's putt stopped on the lip, directly in the line from the putt, and Mrs. Hill had to be satisfied with a half in 6s.

Ends on Sixteenth.

That second bit of rough luck seemed to take the heart out of even such a fighter as the western champion, for she lost the next two holes to Glenna's birdies.

Glenna hit a great spoon approach on the fifteenth, on the pin and 15 feet past it, while Mrs. Hill was short to the left with her second and strong with her pitch. That left her two up with three to play, and on the sixteenth Mrs. Hill sent her brassie approach to just short of a trap. Glenna played a fine iron to the green and Mrs. Hill a low pitch over a trap that ran ten feet past the pin. Glenna putted within a few inches of the cup and Mrs. Hill missed hers for a half.

Mrs. Pressler had more trouble in winning from the slight and pretty Bernice Wall than was expected. The match was close, with Mrs. Pressler in front by one or two holes most of the way until she won the fifteenth and sixteenth; but it was enlivened with some serio-comedy in traps and in measuring putts on the green.

MARQUETTE AND LAWRENCE MEET ON GRID TODAY

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—An open game, with forward passes used frequently, is anticipated when Marquette university and Lawrence college open the local gridiron season at Marquette stadium tomorrow afternoon.

At least three Chicago boys are expected to be in the Marquette starting lineup, with Joe King and Ken Wendt as guards and John Sisk as full back. Mel Brosseau, another Chicagoan, also may be in at one half back position. Tomorrow's lineups:

WHITE SOX TRIM TIGERS BY 14 TO 6 FOR 2D IN A ROW

Henry, Ex-Giant, Hurls Victory.

Dutch Henry, former New York Giant left hander, stopped the Tigers yesterday and the White Sox made it two straight over Detroit, 14 to 6. It was Henry's second start for the Sox and the second time he has given a good account of himself.

The Hose plunked a rookie named Arthur Herring and Vic Sorrell for 18 hits. Herring was tapped for five runs by the Sox in the fourth inning giving the Comiskey team a lead it never lost. In the eighth, the Sox scored eight more. The score:

LOYOLA TO OPEN STADIUM AGAINST OKLAHOMA CITY

Loyola university opens its football season this afternoon with the strong Oklahoma City university at the Ramblers' new stadium on the Rogers Park campus. The Oil City boys outweigh Coach Lamont's squad by ten pounds to the man. They will rely upon the efforts of Ted Hand, full back, and Chuck Wheatly, a half.

George Weimer is the only sophomore in the Loyola line, replacing Fred Sextro, who was injured several days ago. Flynn, a sophomore, will engage in his first game at full, with Les Molloy and Wallie Durkin playing on each side of him. Lineup:

DETROIT DEFEATS DAYTON, 18 TO 0, FOR 17TH WIN

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 4.—[U. P.]—University of Detroit scored its seventeenth consecutive football victory tonight, defeating University of Dayton 18 to 0 before 19,000 spectators.

The Titans made one touchdown in each of the first three periods but failed each time to gain a point after touchdown. Schnits Ross ran 74 yards for the first touchdown.

GIANTS WIN SERIES.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—The American Giants won their series with the American association All Stars here today by breaking even in a double header, winning 3 to 1 and losing 7 to 3.

A-ha! Football Enters Series Scene Again

writers from the New York teams and assigning them to duties having to do with New York U., Harvard, Yale, and the rest. But for the death of Miller Huggins, which was pure reading matter, the eclipse of baseball, including the world series, would have been almost total. Since Mr. Huggins expired, however, there have been the stories of his death, his career, and his funeral, and now there is much conjecture as to whether Babe Ruth, Bob Connery, or Daniel Howley will get the job.

Otherwise the baseball literature appearing in the New York prints consists largely of vicarious or ghosted writing, purporting to give the thoughts of baseball players who cannot think and could not write their thoughts even if they had thoughts. Like the noncommittal football forecasts issued every Friday evening in season by the football coaches who are now sweating their racket in a vigorous way, these predictions of the vicarious baseball authors regarding the world series have been of a familiar and remarkably dull pattern.

Leagues Differ on Outcome.

American league players predict that the Athletics will win the world series, and explain that Grove and Walberg, throwing left handed speed on dark days, will confuse the right handed hitters of the Cubs. The National league authors pick the Cubs and explain their choice with a formula of their own. One day I should like to see by the papers that some American league author had picked the National league team to win the world series, and vice versa; but any ghost writer who would do a thing like that to a trusting author would be stripped of his shroud and chain and cast out of the society of spooks.

It is not strictly pertinent to baseball or the world series, but there were two young men in the literary business around here some years ago who became involved in a case of this kind. The boys were taking daily turns writing installments of an adventure serial under the name of some celebrated female defendant with literary leanings. They were warm friends except when one of them became over stimulated, at which times he usually conceived a jealous grudge against his collaborateur. One evening, this young man met the other young man in a refreshment resort and for no apparent reason seized a Smithfield ham from the free lunch counter and fetched him a stout blow over the head with the knuckle, knocking him down.

Vows to Get Even.

"All right," the young man said as he picked himself up, "I will get even for that," and walked out of the resort to write his installment of the mystery serial for the next day's run of the paper. When this installment appeared the next morning its concluding line read, "And dawn found Cedric Dalngerton floating on a log in the south Pacific ocean, 300 miles off the steamship lanes. Don't miss tomorrow's installment of this thrilling narrative."

But this young man was not a base ball author and his next chapter gaily began: "It is ten years later and the flowers are blooming on the Rue De La Paix."

When I was engaged in spooking, I never betrayed my trust but when I was writing for George H. Ruth, I had always had to control a desire to start off a piece saying, "I do not know what the hell this fellow is writing under my name today as I was out at a brewery last night and anyway I have not seen this guy for the last six weeks. But I will say that in my opinion I would not have twenty some runs if the magnates hadn't hopped up the baseball."

Stecher to Try Holds on Stasiak Monday

Ticket Scalpers in Philadelphia Begin Operations

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 4.—(AP)—As the first batch of world's series tickets were distributed today at Shibe park, speculators actively began business. They offered to pay $50 for a $33 set of tickets and, then, announced they would sell the same set, good for three games here for $100.

Speculators admitted they have few tickets actually on hand now, but declared there will be plenty available tomorrow when the Athletics' management begins distribution of tickets allotted for applications approved.

When fans present their application slips tomorrow and Monday they must sign their names to a pledge that they will not sell the tickets, which will be void if they are sold.

Mrs. Tunney to Undergo Major Operation at Berlin

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—[U.P.]—Mrs. Gene Tunney, American heiress and wife of the former heavyweight champion, will undergo an operation for removal of the appendix tomorrow. The appendix, which is displaced, has made further inflammation possible since Mrs. Tunney underwent an operation at Brioni islands last summer. Prof. A. W. Mayer, who performed the emergency operation at Brioni, will operate tomorrow.

ILLINOIS TACKLES KANSAS TODAY IN GRID INAUGURAL

Zuppke's Latest Strategy Lures Big Ten Scouts.

Referee, Jack Grover of Washington; umpire, A. Haines of Yale; field judge, C. E. McBride of Missouri Valley college; head linesman, I. M. Clarno of Bradley.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—With the initial presentation of Coach Bob Zuppke's newest strategy, the fade formation, adding interest to the engagement, University of Illinois players, Big Ten champions for two successive years, will open the 1929 season against Kansas here tomorrow.

Scouts from rival Big Ten schools will have their pencils sharpened to note the intricacies of the fade formation, which, if it remains the chief weapon in Zuppke's repertoire, will render useless all the material they have collected on the Illini for the last two years.

Coach Bill Hargiss, whose teams in the various places he had coached have won 110 victories and met 31 defeats, brought the Jayhawkers to the stadium today and his athletes appeared to have speed despite bulkiness. Tomorrow's game marks the first Kansas appearance at Illinois since 1917 when the Jayhawkers were beaten.

The invaders' lineup will include a group of sophomores yet untried. With Wietz, Lanum, Walker, Schultz, Steinman and Jolley all unable to play, the Illini will not be at the top strength. Tiny Huddlestun, 247 pound guard, may displace Roush in the starting lineup. Mills may be the first quarter back, but Peters will alternate. The first reserves to be called on probably will include Schumacher, center; Conover and Roush, guards; Hills and Burdick, tackles; Mallin and Hinton, ends; Evans and I. Irwin, half backs; and Robinson, full back.

NEBRASKA FACES S. M. U. TODAY ON RAIN SOAKED GRID

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 4.—(AP)—An inch and a half of rain last night drenched the Nebraska football field, where the Cornhuskers and Southern Methodist university will fight it out tomorrow, but clear skies are now predicted. The well tiled and sloped gridiron in Memorial stadium is expected to be in fair condition.

Coach Dana X. Bible of the Huskers was displeased by the turn of the weather. Southern Methodist, with its 200 pound backfield men and expert kickers, he commented, will be at no disadvantage, even if forced to abandon passing. On the other hand, the whole exhibition is likely to be slower.

Receipts at Chicago today, 14,000 hogs, 9,000 cattle, and 4,000 sheep.

In spite of the comparatively small supply yesterday, hogs experienced an unusually erratic trade. Late declines in lightweights outweighed mild gains in medium and heavy stock early, and brought the general average down 5c at $9.70. Numerous loads reached $10.60 at the opening, but $10.35 was hard to obtain following the 10@15c break in midsession, when larger houses filled orders.

Packing sows were scarce and ruled steady to 25c higher. Packers bought freely on the break and only 2,000 pen-holders remained at the close. The three large houses handled a combined total of about 8,500, including 6,000 good to choice 200@225 lb butchers costing $10.00@10.15.

Choice Kinds Absent.

Yesterday's meager supply of 2,000 cattle met narrow outlet at the week's full decline, and many loads are being carried over for next week's trade on unsatisfactory bids.

Choice kinds were absent, the best here selling at $13.50. With the exception of a few specialties, steers are selling mostly1 $1.00 under the high point of last week. Cows and heifers declined $1.00@1.25 since early last week.

Calves are selling $2.00@3.00 under the high point ten days ago, the attractively low prices of lambs being largely responsible for the decline in this branch.

East Buys Lambs.

Attractively low prices, dwindling supplies, and improved quality brought eastern buyers on the market yesterday with the largest orders in weeks. A sharp upward swing of prices was the result.

The $13.00 quotation put in an appearance soon after the opening, and was a popular price for good lambs, as the market closed fully 25c above the general selling the previous day and 50c above the low spot this week.

Both natives and westerns reached the peak. About 2,500 from Utah and Montana sold at $13.00. Aged and yearling sheep advanced 25c. Feeding lambs were scarce and in good demand at further advances.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 1,400 cattle, 4,000 hogs, and 4,000 sheep, against 960 cattle, 6,245 hogs, and 3,173 sheep the previous Saturday, and 840 cattle, 2,310 hogs, and 5,201 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 34,000 to 48,000. E. E. Hubbard marked 48,000; A. G. Welhener, 45,000; G. M. Chandler, 43,000; S. Lund, C. Southwick, and J. T. Brown, 40,000; W. S. Nicholson, 38,000; H. C. Carlson, J. M. Waters, and W. T. Reneker, 37,000; F. M. Sherwood and F. Knutzen, 35,000, and C. Daley, 34,000.

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, Oct. 4.—Undermined by a flood of bearish rumors, some of them fantastic to the point of absurdity, the stock market collapsed anew today.

Shares of the nation's leading corporations crashed from $2 to $20 a share and many hundreds of millions more in paper fortunes were obliterated, some of them in the space of a few minutes.

By general agreement, it was the wildest trading session the exchange has experienced since the memorable break of March 26 last. Brokers ran around in circles; there were frenzied calls for funds on margin accounts; telephone wires throughout the financial district buzzed incessantly; clerks and other help were harried hither and yon; the ticker fell nearly a full hour behind the pace of floor operations.

Excitement at White Heat.

Excitement reached a white heat early in the last few minutes of trading when the scene approached pandemonium as wild-eyed traders sought to clean up remaining selling orders before the gong sounded. It will take the office help of many brokerage houses most of the night to clean up the debris left by the upheaval.

There were many explanations for the selling drive. One of the weirdest was that powerful foreign interests had combined to break the market here. Others had it that this or that brokerage firm, undone by the steady liquidation of the last month, was being "taken over." There were some wild guesses at the next brokerage house figures — some of them purported to be based on "information." "Necessary liquidation" said one batch of experts. "Only the tail end of yesterday's storm," said another group.

But whatever the cause or causes—and whether there was any real basis at all for it—the street was in an extremely nervous condition and ready to lend an ear to any tales that blew. The selling fever was epidemic.

Among Chief Losers.

Among the chief losers were Wright Aero, off 30 points; Case Thrashing Machine, down 25; Columbia Carbon, 12; Auburn Auto, 12; Motor Products, 9%; Brooklyn Union Gas, 47⅛; Commercial Solvents, 10; Peoples Gas, 6⅞; Allied Chemical, 7; Delaware and Hudson, 9; Otis Elevator, 8; National Lead, 13¾, and Greene Cananea Copper, 10 points.

There were any number of losses of from 1 to 5 points and more extending to virtually every section of the list.

Steel was acutely weak all day although several attempts were made to bolster up this old time leader of the list. The stock got down to a new low for the movement at 206½ but later rallied sharply, going up to 215. In the last hour, however, it sold off again, closing at 210, a net loss of 1 points for the day.

The secondary crack in Steel was really what precipitated the last hour's outburst of selling.

Bullish Support.

Evidently powerful influences were striving to bolster up the market under the leadership of this old reliable. There was strong buying in a number of other so-called pivotals such as American Can, which was bolstered some 7 points to a level which left it with a net gain of 1½ points on the day.

Radio corporation came in for effective support in the crises and held within a fraction of last night's close. Du Pont after giving way some 4 points came back with a rush and had a net advance of 1¾ points to its credit at the finish.

American Waterworks outdid them all, soaring up some 8 points above its previous close. National Biscuit recorded a substantial gain for the day, as did Standard Gas and Electric and other high class issues scattered throughout the list.

But the gains were not sufficiently marked to make a worthwhile showing—serving rather to emphasize by their strength the weakness of hard hit issues all about them.

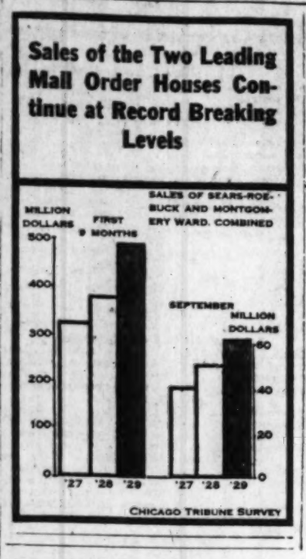
No considerable part of any single group escaped the debacle. Industrials, rails, utilities, oils, specialties—they all went down in a heap. The turnover mounted to 5,617,900 shares

In Topheavy Condition.

On the floor of the exchange the most popular theory of the slump seemed to be that it was the aftermath of the Hatry failure in London about one week ago. The market here was in a topheavy condition and had reached a stalemate. Otherwise it would not have been so hard hit.

It was freely gossiped that British financiers have been heavily interested in this market and that they have sold American securities to protect British holdings.

It was also pointed out that so much has been the drain of gold on England from France that even conservative English bankers have been compelled to let go their American holdings. This market is much more sensitive to what occurs in England now because of the affiliations that have been made between British and American financial interests in the last few years. It is feared in London that the bank rate may have to be put to 6 per cent to attract funds over here.



PRICES SUFFER IN N. Y. BOND MART TRADING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—Bonds traded in on the stock exchange suffered their greatest decline of the week in the session today. However, several of the leading convertibles and a scattering of other issues closed with gains. Railroad bonds were under considerable pressure all day despite the ease in the money rate to six per cent which is the year's low which has been touched on several occasions.

American Telephone and Telegraph convertible 4½s moved up ⅜ of a point following its break on the previous day of more than 10 points. International Telephone and Telegraph convertible 4½s, however, dropped 3½ points to a new low on the movement. American International 5½s sold off 1½ and both issues of Allegheny corporation 5s were up ½ point. Atchison convertible 4½s lost half a point. The convertible 5½s on the Commercial Investment Trust sold off fractionally.

Industrial and public utility bonds were generally lower. In the former group the actively traded Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron 6s were ½ point lower for the day. Vertientes Sugar 7s dropped 3 points.

EXCHANGE PLANS TO TRADE IN CHEESE FUTURES

Future trading in cheese is expected to begin on the Chicago mercantile exchange this month along the general lines now followed in butter and egg futures, according to Secretary Lawrence Davis of the exchange.

"The marketing of cheese is going through the same stages as butter and eggs," Mr. Davis said, "and the trade feels the need of the stabilizing influence that the exchange facilities can provide. Cheese is a seasonal product, like butter and eggs, with a surplus to be stored. This involves risk which can be minimized by regulated future trading and the process of hedging to protect against market fluctuations."

The plans call for trading in car lots averaging 20,000 lbs per car. Prices will be quoted in cents per pound.

Williams Foresees Period of Aviation Readjustment

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Harvey L. Williams, president of Air Investors, Inc., an investment trust specializing in aeronautical securities, stated today that, foreseeing a period of readjustment in the air industry, due to overproduction of small planes and impending reduction in air mail contracts, his company has decided to concentrate on the securities of companies specializing in basic activities rather than special products, such as individual types of planes or engines. He said the company had maintained substantial investments in such companies as Aluminum Company of America, Bohn Aluminum, Bendix Aviation, and Thompson Products.

Rally on Curb Is Followed by Sharp Decline

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—Prices on the curb exchange today followed closely the trend of those on the big board, with an initial drop, a brief rallying halt, and then a severe downward plunge. A last minute rally brought quotations in many issues back nearer normal, but the list as a whole showed the results of the heavy bearish pressure that has been clamped on for the greater part of the day.

The ticker trailed the market most of the day by more than an hour, but the lateness was caused by the numerous separate transactions in each issue rather than by an unusually large turnover. Despite the vast number of individual deals the volume of business for the day in total number of shares was not excessive.

Utility Values Melt.

Utility values melted away under the stream of orders, many of which represented liquidation forced by calling of bank and private loans. Investment trust issues, reflecting the dwindling of their portfolios also slumped sharply. Hydro-electric Securities and Goldman-Sachs were chief sufferers.

Electric investors among utilities suffered the largest loss, selling off 26½ points. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, down 8; Electric Bond and Share, off 4¼; Northern States Power, down 9, and Middle West Utilities, old, down 18¾, were prominent among utilities heavily affected by the decline. While utility stocks at times enjoyed the sharpest recovery the group was at the same time weakest in the declines.

Investments Weak.

Investment trust issues, as well as industrial specialties, showed little or no signs of support. Goldman-Sachs, Lehman corporation, Tri-Continental, and others slipped back to the lowest levels in months. Among the industrials General Theater Equipment, Crocker Wheeler, old, Fokker Aircraft, and Thompson Products recorded large declines.

BRASCO CO. BUYS MORGAN-GARDNER HARVEY PLANT

The Brasco Manufacturing company of 5025 South Wabash avenue, manufacturer and national distributor of metal store fronts, has purchased for an undisclosed consideration, subject to $75,000, the plant of the Morgan-Gardner Electric company at 152d and Halsted streets, Harvey. The purchase includes a concrete, one story manufacturing building containing 53,000 square feet, and 3½ acres of land. Hodge, Nicolson & Porter and Chandler & Montague were brokers.

Columbian Carbon Co. Directors Approve Offering

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—Directors of the Columbian Carbon company have approved an offering to stockholders of 41,161 shares of authorized, but unissued, stock of the company to stockholders of record on Oct. 18, at $175 a share on a basis of nine shares of additional stock for each 100 shares held. The offer expires on Oct. 31. Stock in the company closed today on the New York stock exchange at 288 and on this basis the rights offered stockholders are estimated to be worth about $9.30 on each share.

FACE ECONOMIC LAWS IN SHORT WORKING DAY

Industries Differ in Needs.

BY SCRUTATOR.

Some recognition must be given in considering the trend of hours of labor per week in the United States to a rather more subtle movement than the mere granting or obtaining of shortened hours by negotiations of workmen and employers.

When the number of persons employed in manufacturing processes becomes less and the number of those engaged in clerical work becomes greater, and it has been established that a larger relative part of the population is in the so-called white collar classes, the hours of these latter workers become more important in the calculations.

The census reports have shown and the statements of labor leaders support the assumption that employment in factory operations has fallen in total numbers and relatively, as well, to employment in all lines. The same reports show that clerical working forces are increasing.

Hours of Office Workers.

What, then, are the hours of clerical help? The government's bureau of labor statistics has in the last few weeks released figures showing that in general they are less per week than the industrial workers'. Statistics were gathered covering 446,000 office employés working for private firms. Of these, 31 per cent worked less than forty hours a week, 16 per cent more than forty and less than forty-two, and 5 per cent more than forty-two and less than forty-four. Slightly more than 5 per cent worked more than forty-eight hours.

Shorter hours in clerical occupations seem economically sound. Few firms, at a guess, could find enough work on Saturday afternoons for forces required for business operations during the rest of the week. Insurance offices almost invariably, close at noon on Saturdays.

Not one that came into the survey stayed open after 1:30 the last day of the week. It may fairly be regarded as probable that a full six days would be the week for a clerical worker if it paid. It doesn't.

Concentration Is Heavier.

Office help, it must be remembered, is concentrated in the larger cities in central locations even more than industrial workers are. Probably on the average these employés spend more time in transit than factory and construction workers. Also, they can use leisure to great advantage.

Not all workers can do this. A classic example of one who is limited in what he can do with spare hours is the laborer on a dredge in the Mississippi. Held to a workday of eight hours and compelled to remain the other sixteen, usually on board, he must suffer a great ennui while he rests.

It is conceivable that the white collar worker pays in lower wages for his pleasant working conditions and short hours. A government survey of 500 families of federal employés in Chicago, New York, Boston, Baltimore and New Orleans showed that they had a stern struggle to make ends meet. Families with incomes less than $2,500 and having at least one child were considered.

The conclusion was that less than 10 per cent were able to live on the husband's salary, and that from 48 to 69 per cent of them had expenses above their income from all sources.

Government Pays Less.

The survey indicated that the government paid less than the private firms' rates for similar services in the low wage groups. Another new bureau of labor statistics publication shows that some municipalities have failed to do much toward getting short hours for their unskilled workers.

Labor unions are devoted to obtaining a forty hour week. In the building trades they have already had a large measure of success, and William J. McSorley, president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, states that the department now has 400,000 men working five days a week. Because of a lack of steady work for the members the year round, even with this system the five day week may be economical for them.

So far the construction industry has been able to get along under this arrangement. Other industries, notably coal mining, were not able to grant a shorter week, and it is generally recognized that economic laws must be complied with before making reductions.

CHAIN STORE GROUPS REPORT INCREASES IN SEPTEMBER SALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—Kline Brothers company reports September sales totaling $411,907, compared with $287,001, in the same month last year, a gain of 43.4 per cent. For the first nine months this year the sales amounted to $3,153,652, against $2,179,612 in the 1928 period, a gain of 44.8 per cent.

Gross sales of H. M. Fishman company, Inc., new stores included, for September, amounted to $171,235, against $74,491 in the same period of 1928, an increase of 129.8 per cent. Sales for the nine months were $1,210,331, against $486,527, an increase of 148.7 per cent.

Sales of Isaac Silver & Bros., new stores included, for September, aggregated $678,546, against $511,562 in the corresponding period of 1928, an increase of 32.6 per cent. Sales for the nine months were $5,213,973, against $4,053,230, an increase of 28.6 per cent

G. C. Murphy company reports September sales of $1,335,918, compared with $1,045,605 in the month last year, an increase of 27.7 per cent. For the first nine months the sales were $10,213,915, against $7,480,446 in the 1923 period, an increase of 36.5 per cent.

TOTAL TRADE OF CANADA SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Canada's total trade for the first quarter of the current fiscal year amounted to $626,164,064, an increase from $592,647,659 for the corresponding period last year. This is shown in the quarterly report issued today by the department of trade and commerce. For the three months imports into Canada exceeded exports by $43,999,622.

Imports totaled $335,081,843 as compared with $291,082,221 in exports. In comparison with the figures for the first three months of the previous fiscal year, the quarterly imports into Canada increased by over $32,000,000 while exports rose slightly over $1,000,000.

Montreal Stock Exchange Experiences Drastic Slump

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Millions of dollars were clipped from listings on the Montreal stock exchange today. In the morning session alone it was estimated that more than $60,000,000 had been washed from the exchange's valuations, and later trading augumented that figure. The decline was the most severe that has been witnessed on the local exchange in several months.

Kraft-Phenix Company Acquires D. J. Easton, Inc.

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—The Kraft-Phenix Cheese company has acquired D. J. Easton, Inc., of Newark, N. J., manufacturers of mayonnaise and having an annual sales volume of $1,500,000. The Kraft organization has recently acquired four manufacturers of mayonnaise with a total sales volume of $5,000,000 annually.

National Tea Sales May Aggregate $90,000,000

The National Tea company is having the best year in its history and total sales are expected to be around $90,000,000, compared with $85,881,696 in 1928, according to President George Rasmussen.

Business Failures Drop to 39 in U. S. for Week

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Business failures in the United States this week declined to 396, 32 less than the 428 last week, R. G. Dun & Co. reported today. Failures for the corresponding week last year totaled 429.

Walgreen Buys Summer Estate on Rock River

Dixon, Ill., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Charles R. Walgreen, Chicago drug magnate, today purchased a 144-acre scenic and historic estate on the Rock river from E. H. Brewster to be used for a summer estate.

Nash Motors Reports Net for Quarter

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—Earnings of the Nash Motors company in the quarter ended Aug. 31 amounted to $3,068,657, after deducting all manufacturing costs, depreciation, selling, and administration costs and state and federal taxes. Earnings in the first nine months of the company's fiscal year totaled $13,810,857, against $12,039,704 in the corresponding period of last year.

The third quarter's earnings were equivalent to $1.12 a share on 2,730,000 shares of stock. This compares with $6,623,329, or $2.42 a share, in the previous quarter and with $6,666,853, or $2.44 a share, in the August quarter of 1928.

President C. W. Nash, in commenting on the report, said that the showing was satisfactory to the management, making allowance for the fact that during the quarter ended Aug. 31 the company completely shut down its plants for six weeks preparatory to bringing out a new line of cars so that its dealer organization might have an opportunity to dispose of previous models on hand.

The company also was under heavy expense during July and August in connection with the introduction of the new line. The statement set out that the management is optimistic over the outlook for the fourth quarter in view of the fact that the new models just announced are being well received.

Railroad Equipment Business on Upgrade

New York, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Railroad cars, including freight and passenger, ordered during the first nine months of the year, totaled 67,240, nearly 27 per cent more than the amount ordered during the full 1928 year, according to Railway Age. Locomotives ordered numbered 672, an increase of 11 per cent over the number ordered during the entire 1928 year.

CHICAGO PRICES ZIGZAG DOWN IN EXCITING STYLE

Stop Loss Orders Caught in Dips.

BY GEORGE HAMMOND.

A zigzag course which ended at the bottom for most issues added excitement to the second day's debacle of the market on the Chicago stock exchange yesterday. Sharpshooters on the floor added more pepper to the sauce by dipping prices down to catch up every stop loss order which made an appearance.

The "shorts" fell on Auburn Automobile and drove that issue down forty points to a low of 355 after which they scurried in to cover, an action which drove the price up to 370, thereby cutting twenty-five points off the decline for a net loss of 15 points for the day.

Bendix Aviation was down five points at one time and buying near the close cut that loss in half. Great Lakes Aircraft and Houdaille-Hershey "A" each closed 2½ points lower. Ross Gear finished with a net gain of a point on small sales.

Grigsby Gets Support.

Pool support in Grigsby-Grunow battled a strong bombardment of shorts. The biggest dent made by the attacking forces was a decline of 1¾ points after which the stock closed a major fraction higher for the day. More than 75,500 shares of this stock

News and Gossip of Stock Markets

Dries Up Power Rumors.

One effect of the present decline of utility shares has been the drying up of reports concerning prospective power mergers, although the resistance of some of the gas stocks has had an opposite effect. Whether some of the power mergers frequently rumored in past weeks had any foundation in fact or not it is evident that the presentation to stockholders of plans for security exchanges in the face of a bear market is quite impossible, and no new developments of this nature are to be expected before the price level of power and light stocks is stabilized.

Confusion in Steel.

Final dealings in United States Steel common yesterday were so confused as to support the contention that the stock was the victim of a well organized bear raid. There were indications of a collision between the faction committed to the resumption of the advance and those seeking to depress the stock further. The late dip carried the stock to 206½, a new low for the movement.

May Seek Rate Cuts.

The unequaled prosperity which the railroads are enjoying this year has its drawbacks, it was remarked yesterday. The point in mind when this comment was made as the argument which eastern shipping agencies will use in making for a revision of freight rates. These organizations will contend that the great increase in earnings of the railroads this year justifies reopening the eastern class rate case with a view to cutting costs to shippers.

Marks Expansion Step.

Approval by the New York stock exchange of Moon Motor Car's application to list 100,000 shares of no par common probably marks the first step in the company's expansion program whereby it is reaching out in other fields than the automobile industry alone. Moon has closed a contract to manufacture a newly perfected, automatically operated machine for agricultural uses. The stock listed does not represent an additional issue but is a readjustment of capital whereby 400,000 shares were reduced to 100,000.

Grows in Popularity.

Growing popularity of Loew's, Inc., among the amusement shares and its stout resistance to pressure in the current decline may be ascribed to its prospects of being absorbed by Fox Films or Fox Theaters on a more favorable basis than first indicated. Last March it was announced that the latter corporation had purchased a substantial block of stock from the Marcus Loew estate at a price reported to have been between $120 and $125 a share, as compared with the current market valuation of about 61.

Transfer Affections to Oils.

Accumulation of Standard Oil of New Jersey is proceeding whenever the stock is offered at concessions, according to many market observers. A block of 10,000 shares was taken at the opening at a fractional decline and other large transactions were recorded throughout the session. Many traders have transferred their affections to the oils in the last few days because of the comparative stability of the group.

Gets Repeat Orders.

More than $2,000,000 of repeat orders have been placed within the last week with the Combustion Engineering corporation, American subsidiary of the International Combustion Engineering corporation, it was announced by the company. These were received from the Bethlehem Steel company, the Kansas City Power and Light company and the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company.

Some Thoughts on the Subject of Investments

To Our Clients, Friends and Purchasers of Investment Securities Generally:

THOUGHTFUL students of financial affairs are commenting in the press on the present unsettled condition of the investment security market, that such disturbed condition primarily is due to the attitude of a great number of security buyers in ignoring an essential element of investment, to-wit, a fair return on security purchases in reference to the price paid, and in wagering on capital increases in value dissociated from sound economic factors that contribute to such increases.

The result of this attitude on the part of security buyers is the pronounced anomalous situation wherein the yield at the price paid is often not more than 2 or 3 per cent, and often less. Prices in many instances are now on a level that discounts a future so distant as to be below the range of visibility.

A statement of fundamental principles by an investment house, conscious of a serious duty toward its customers, as a guide in the abnormal period through which securities are passing, seemingly is pertinent.

The fundamental principles to which the investment house should undeviatingly adhere are:

(a) That safety will not be compromised for the sake of conforming to new investment styles, however fashionable; but the form of security issues can be and in many cases should be adapted to changing demands without in any way detracting from security;

(b) That yield will be commensurate with the toll which money should receive at the time of offering, or within a reasonable period after offering, and that such yield, as a minimum, should be paid for the period the securities are outstanding;

(c) That, if consistent with the nature of the security offered, opportunity should be provided for participation in future earnings, by way of warrants, conversion privilege, unit offering or similar means.

There is a feeling on the part of many security holders that an investment house has a definite duty of wide market support. In our opinion the duty of market support is often misunderstood by a security purchaser. The investment house undoubtedly owes the duty to support a reasonable market for securities it has distributed, but such support should be consistent with sound financial practice. Investors should remember that in purchasing securities having a broad, general and immediate market, they are purchasing securities in most instances dissociated from institutional support and that securities are absorbed by the public because of the background, in many instances national in scope, pertaining to them. This type of market support, dissociated from any institution, generally is paid for by the investor in the form of a lower yield.

The great majority of securities are in a measure dependent on the market support derived from their institutional background. This market support rests on the distributive ability of the particular institution in question, and the distributive ability of the institution in turn is dependent on what investments its public will absorb by way of security purchase. If the investing public will not absorb the particular type of security, the market support by the institution of necessity becomes restricted. An economic condition of this type, such as we have at present, requires time for a return to normal.

If an investment house can state to its clientele—"Your investment is safe; your investment is still yielding as a minimum that return which was the equitable toll that money should have received for its use at the time of your purchase of the security; the securities were originally properly distributed through a strong organization and every effort is and will be made to provide a market commensurate with current prices of similar classes of investments"—it has done its duty in full measure. Broad market support by any institution can only be given to an extent consistent with the current public demand for securities of the type in question.

WHEAT PRICES ADVANCE AGAIN; CLOSE NEAR TOP

Selling Against Offers Is Check on Corn.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain markets yesterday paid little attention to the weakness in securities and after a period of uncertainty at the start due to an accumulation of over night selling orders, prices advanced sharply. The finish was within a fraction of the top with net gains of ⅞@1c.

Strength in Winnipeg had some effect on sentiment which was less bearish than on Thursday, and the Canadian market gained 1⅛@2c for the day. Buenos Aires was a distinct surprise, finishing 1@1¼c higher. News developments as a whole had little effect.

Buying of corn to close spreads with wheat, and local support gave the former market a firm undertone throughout the day with the bulge checked by selling against offers. Net gains were ⅝@1c. Oats held within narrow limits and finished unchanged to ½ higher. Rye was ⅝c higher to ⅝c lower, the latter on March.

Await Export Demand.

Wheat traders generally feel that it is simply a question of time before Europe will be forced to come to North America for supplies and are not disposed to take the selling side on the sharp breaks, while the Canadian bands and press generally are now taking up the campaign to have farmers and others hold for higher prices.

The fact that the wheat market rallied quickly from breaks, despite bearish foreign propaganda is having some effect on sentiment. The Argentine and Australian crops are not yet made, while all official reports show that the United States and Canada have much smaller yields than last year, and private returns suggesting that the southern hemisphere cannot come within 100,000,000 bu of equalling last year's crop.

There was around 50,000 bu Manitobas sold for export during the day with but little interest in hard winters. At the same time advices from the seaboard indicated that exporters were gradually getting out of the winters they had bought. Liverpool closed ⅞@1¼d lower, with additional storage room provided in that market. Cash wheat continues relatively firm at leading terminal markets, with the basis here steady to ½c higher. Primary shipments for the day exceeded the arrivals for the first time in a number of weeks.

Corn Trade Light.

Outside interest in the corn market fails to show any indication of broadening, and the bulk of the business is of a local character, with the news apparently having little effect one way or the other. A little frost was reported in Illinois over night, but the forecast was for rising temperatures, and no damage of consequence was feared. Country offerings to arrive were small with the spot basis steady to ½c higher. Buenos Aires finished ½c higher for the day.

IMPROVED CALL FOR LARD

An increased business was on yesterday in cash lard, particularly with refiners, who are said to be having a better trade. There is also a better general demand for meats and particularly for bacon.

Liverpool showed more strength with an advance of 1s 3d to 2s on lard and 1s on Cumberlands and fat backs. Shipments of the meat show good increase over last year, with lard a small decrease.

Speculative trading in lard futures was fair with commission houses buying deferred futures. Prices had a range of 13½c and closed with net gains of 2½ to 5c higher. Bellies were 5 to 10c higher.

Exports of lard were 2,020,770 lbs and of bacon 301,500 lbs. Hogs were higher with receipts at western points exceeding a week and one and two years ago. Prices follow:

Atlas Radio Stores finished a point down. Directors declared a stock dividend of ten per cent in connection with the terms of the recently announced merger plans. A dividend of $1 in cash and five per cent in stock was also voted. Wextark Stores also eased a point.

Utah Radio was down a major fraction. Henry C. Forster, vice president and general manager, announced that directors have called a meeting of the stockholders for Oct. 28 to consider a proposal to increase the authorized no par common stock from 250,000 to 1,000,000 shares. He added that some of the additional stock will be issued in acquiring several additional companies, the names of which will be made known at the meeting.

The softest spot in the general list was General Theater Equipment, which reacted 5½ points. Declines of from one to three points were felt by Bulova Watch, Yates American Machine, U. S. Gypsum, Monsanto Chemical, Art Metal Works, and Q. R. S. De Vry.

Insull Trust Weak.

Insull Utility Investments was the weakest of the investment trust group, closing five points lower. Declines ranging from 1¾ to 2¾ were felt by National Securities Investment, Burnham Trading, Manhattan-Dearborn, Northwest Bancorporation, Utility and Industrial, and Continental Chicago.

In the utility division, Commonwealth Edison closed 3¾ lower. Middle West Utilities new declined 2¼, and the old stock dropped thirty-three points on odd lot sales of less than 10 shares. United Gas was an exception with a gain of two points.

RAIL EARNINGS TO BE CITED IN RATE PETITION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—Members of the Trunk Line and New England Shippers' committee, which was organized some months ago under the leadership of the Merchants' association, met today and agreed to petition the interstate commerce commission for reopening the eastern class rate case in order to put on the record evidence of the large earnings by the railroads this year.

William H. Chandler, manager of the traffic bureau of the association, who, as chairman of the committee, presided at the meeting, said afterward that a similar meeting had been held simultaneously in Chicago and that it was likely western shippers would join in asking for reopening of the case.

The evidence which it is proposed to submit to the commission shows that in the first seven months of 1929 the railroads involved increased their net operating income by $63,000,000 from the same period last year, indicating a total increase for the year of $108,000,000. It is held that in view of these earnings the roads are not entitled to the additional $60,000,000 which they would earn under the rate recommended by the examiner in the case.

Fast Freight Shipments 93.98% Efficient in Sept.

Fast freight shipments from Chicago showed an "on time" performance of 93.98 per cent during the last month, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce. Of the 65,557 package cars consigned to all sections of the United States and Canada and moved by the report, 61,607 reached destination on schedule. This compares with a record of 91.02 per cent during the same period a year ago.

Preferred Accident Co. Plans Stock Splitup

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 4.—A splitup, probably on a 10 for 1 basis, is under consideration by the Preferred Accident Insurance company of this city, it became known today. The stock has at least an altitude over the counter of more than $400 a share, making it somewhat inaccessible except for wealthy investors.

SAKS 5TH AVENUE STORE LEASES ANOTHER FLOOR

Two Antique Firms Rent Boulevard Space.

BY AL CHASE.

Three important leases, each one involving a large floor area, yesterday were reported closed in the upper Michigan avenue area north of Chicago avenue. Saks Fifth Avenue store, according to Frankenstein & Co., have taken over additional space and now occupy four floors in the Michigan-Chestnut building.

The other two leases were made by antique firms. The Bristol Antique Importing company of New York City has rented the entire seventh floor of the Michigan-Chestnut building for a term of years. The annual rental was not disclosed by Frankenstein & Co. The space leased will be used as exhibit and sales rooms.

London Firm Expands.

Nachemsohn of London, who has a shop in the 900 North Michigan avenue building, for the sale of antiques and objects of art, has leased 4,000 square feet on the boulevard side of the building on the third floor, where he will establish an interior decorating department. It will be connected with the ground floor store, which contains 750 square feet, by a private elevator.

According to Ross & Browne, who negotiated the lease, the average annual rental of the combined floor areas will be $17,200. The lessor is the 900 Michigan Avenue North Building corporation.

Buys Oakley-19th Corner.

The northeast corner of West 19th street and South Oakley avenue, 125x125, improved with a building containing three stores, seven apartments, and three recreation halls, was sold by the Providers' Securities corporation to Robert M. Perbohner for an undisclosed price. Mr. Perbohner gave a 320 acre farm at Marengo, Ill., in part payment.

Benjamin Dissen has sold the one story store building at 3226 Bryn Mawr avenue, 25x125, to Emil Mayer. The property is leased for fifteen years to the Loblaw Groceterias. Herman Neiburger was the only broker.

KARPEN & BROS. BUY FACTORY IN RAVENSWOOD

S. Karpen & Bros., furniture makers, yesterday bought for investment the three story factory building at the southwest corner of Ravenswood park and Foster avenue, lot 200x152, from the Drying Systems, Inc., for an undisclosed price. The building is under lease to the Autopoint company for five years beginning Aug. 9, 1929, with an option to purchase within four years, and also an option to extend its lease another five years. According to Leo Karpen, president of S. Karpen & Bros., the factory was bought for investment and his concern has no intention of using it for the manufacture of furniture.

Thom McAn Shoe Co. Rents Broadway Shop

The Thom McAn Shoe company has leased from A. W. Hannah a twelve foot store at 4629 Broadway for a ten year term at a reported total rental of $54,000. The twenty-five foot frontage, of which this twelve foot shop is a part, will be rebuilt with a new building next spring. Cerf & Ehrenhalt and Warren A. Cahn were brokers.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

We have built up a big business in confining ourselves to doing small things.

If you had the opportunity of meeting our customers and talking over the details of a "mere trifling $500" loan, you would certainly be impressed with the importance of that loan to the borrower and how big a figure it cuts in his financial affairs.

Our second mortgage loans are naturally of larger denomination. Yet as real estate transactions go they are not what you would call big loans. Think of this—if a $500 loan made through the Personal Loan & Savings Bank is of big importance to the average family in shaping up its financial affairs, how much more important must be a loan of even larger amount which has to do with the home the family lives in?

It is the business of the Personal Loan & Savings Bank to do small things BIG. It is the business of our real estate loan department to be even bigger in its handling of loans backed by the home.

Our rates and terms are extremely fair. You may pay as low as 2% of the principal per month, plus interest which does not exceed 6%, and a commission deducted at the time the loan is made as follows:

65.00 per 1,000 for 2 years.
90.00 per 1,000 for 3 years.

STUDEBAKER
EVERY CAR MUST GO, REGARDLESS OF ORIGINAL COST

By Tuesday we will be moved out of our present quarters, but we want to move our used cars before we leave. That's your opportunity to make a sensational saving. Investigate this sale at once!

DE SOTO SEDAN. This 1929 model was driven so little that today it is the last word for sparkling performance and beautiful appearance. Because of business reasons the former owner told us he wanted a bigger car, and that's the only reason he traded in this De Soto. If you examine it carefully you'll be forced to admit that it's brand new in every respect. Has 4 wheel brakes and very full equipment. Removal price $785

CHRYSLER COUPE. A recent "62" with rumble seat. "I only used this car to drive me to the golf links and back," said the retired Elmhurst business man who owned this car. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. The upholstery has not a worn spot and the finish is beautiful. Removal price....$625

BUICK SEDAN. A stock broker who recently cleaned up on the market decided he wanted two new Studebakers, so he traded in this 1929 model even though he had given it so little use that it looks and runs like new today. It's a model 29-51, with 129 inch w. b. The upholstery is luxurious and there's not a mar on the handsomely quered finish. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, spare tire, bumpers, driving light, trunk, etc. Removal price..$1,385

NASH BROUGHAM. Try to duplicate this Nash any place else at anywhere near our price. It simply can't be done! Every feature is in dandy condition and the equipment includes 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. The removal of this Adv. 6, four dr. model is..... $545

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. This is probably the best Studebaker value in Chicago. It's a 1928 Dictator, finished a beautiful blue. The mileage is very low as this car was in storage for nearly a year. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire and other extras. The motor is excellent. This car will not remain long at our removal price of $745

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN. 1927. Model 80, that is exceptionally clean thruout. Motor A-1. 4 whl. brakes and many extras. Removal price $850

HUDSON ROADSTER. One of the most recent models with rumble seat. It's de luxe in every respect. Finished a smart two tone combination of light green and tan. Unusually well equipped. Very low mileage. Removal price..... $885

PAIGE SEDAN, 1928. 7 Pass. Finished a beautiful tan. Has several hundred dollars' worth of extra eqpmt. Removal price..$650

PACKARD SEDAN, 7 Pass. 6, equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, driving light, spotlight, bumpers, etc. Was traded in by a wealthy polo player who gave it exceptional care. Has snappy performance and fine appearance is unusually attractive. Will not remain long at our removal sale pr. of $685

STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT. A recent 5 pass., str. 6, with wire wheels, fender wells, and hundreds of dollars' worth of extra equipment. Motor is smooth and powerful, and the upholstery, finish, carpets and tires are practically 100%. Removal price..$1,285

That model 115, in a 5 pass. full sport sedan, with wire wheels, mounted forward in fender wells, and finished in a rich, deep, suburban blue, with "spotless-spotless-flawless," or any words to describe, even new would not in the slightest exaggerate the appearance and performance of this perfect Auburn Big 8. And, pray, tell us what perfect car is better than Auburn.

This finance co. offer is at a savings of close to 50 cents on the dollar, with a down payment of around $325 in cash or trade and bal. up to 18 months. Real buyers be sure to see this car Sunday, Oct. 6, after 10 a. m. at our warehouse, 5247-55 S. State. Kenwood 2736.
